CHAPTER XIX .- Continued.

-- 14-You refuse obedience to the gover mer of New France?"

"No, monsieur; I am under orders to obey. There will be no trouble be tween us if you are just to my men La Barre is not here to decide this but I am." He put his hand on D'Ar tigny's shoulder. "Monsieur Cassion charges this man with murder. He is and given a fair trial. What more ean you ask?" "You will protect him! help him to escape, ratherl" burst out Cassion. "That is the scheme, De Baugis,"

Your words are Insult, monsteur, and I hear no more. If you seek quarrel, you shall have it. I am your equal, monsionr, and my commission comes from the king. Ah, M. de la Durantaye, what say you of this matter?"

A man, broad-shouldered, in the dress of a woodsman, elbowed his way through the throng of soldiers. He had a strong, good-humored face.

"In falth, I heard little of the contraversy, yet 'tis like I know the gist of it, as I have just conversed with a wounded soldier of mine, Barbeau who repeated the story as he understood it. My hand to you, Sleur d'Ar timy, and it seems to me, messleurs. that De Tonty both the right of it."

"You take his side against us who have the authority of the governor?" "Pah! that is not the Issue. "Tis merely a question of justice to this lad bere. I stand for fair trial with Henri de Tonty, and will back my judgment with my sword." They stood eye to eye, the four of them, and the group of soldlers seemed to divide, each company drawing to gether. Cassion growled some vague threat, but De Baugis took another course, gripping his companion by the

"No, Francois, 'lis not worth the danger," he expostulated. "There will be no crossing of steel. Monsteur Cassion, no doubt, hath reason to be angered-but not I. The man shall have his trial, and we will learn the right and wrong of all this presently. Monslenr Tonly, the prisoner is left in year charge. Pall back men-to your barracks. Madame, permit me to offer you my escort.

"To where, monsieur?"

"To the only quarters fitted for your emention," he said gallantly, "those I have occupied since arrival here." "You vacate them for me?"

"With the utmost pleasure," bowing gallantly. "I beg of you their acceptance: your husband has been my guest, and will join me in extle."

'I will use your quarters gladly. will ask to be left there undis

"Most assuredly madame-my serv ant will accompany you."

"Then good night, messleurs," faced Cassion, meeting his eyes frankly. "I am greatly wearied, and would rest; tomorrow I will speak with you. monaleur. Permit to pass."

He stood aside, unable to affront me, although the anger in his face was evidence enough of brewing trouble. No doubt he had boasted of me to De Baugia, and felt no desire now to have our true relations exposed thus pubficly. I passed him, glancing at none of the others, and followed the soldier across the beaten parade. A moment later I was safely hidden within a two-roomed cabin. A table and two chairs, sufely made with ax and knife, comprised the entire farniture, but a small mirror, unframed, hung suspended against the farther wall. I glanced at my reflection in the glass, surprised to learn bow little change the weeks had made in my appearance. It was still the face of a girl which gazed back at me, with clear, wide-open eyes, and cheeks flushed in the firelight. Strange to say, the very sight of my youthful ness was a disempointment, and brought with it doubt. How could I fight these men? How could I hope to win against their schemes and plans of rengeance?

I opened the single window, and leaned out, grateful for the fresh alblowing against my face, but unable to perceive the scene below shrouded in darkness. Far away, down the valley, was the red glow of a fire, itflame reflecting over the surface of the river. I knew I stared down into a great void, but could hear no soutel except a faint gurgle of water directly beneath. I closed the window shutter, and, urged by some impulse, crossed over to the door leading to the other apartment. It was a sleeping room scarcely more than a large closer, with garments hanging on negs ngning the logs, and two rude bunks opposite the door. But the thing which captured my eyes was a bag of brown leather lying on the floor at the head of one of the binks-a shapeless bag, having no distinctive mark about it, and ye which I instantly recognized-since boat. As I stood staring at it, I remem-hered the words of De Baugls, "your husband has been my guest." Ay. that was it-this had been Cassion's quarters since his arrival, and this was his bag the one he kept beside him in the canoe, his private property My heart beat wildly in the excitement of discovery, yet there was no hesitation; instantly I was upon my knees tugging at the straps. They yielded enally, and I forced the securely fastened, and on opening this to address him. with trembling fingers, a number of papers were disclosed.

I discovered nothing but clothes at first-moreusius and numerous underevidently new, and quite gorgeous,

Scarcely venturing to breathe, hardly knowing what I hoped to find. drew these forth, and glanced hastliy at them. Surely the man would bear a fourney; these must be papers of value, for I had noted with what care an officer of my command, and I he had guarded the bag all the way. arrest bim. He shall be protected. Yet at first I discovered nothing to reward my search-there was a package of letters, carefully bound with a strong cord, a commission from La Barre, creating Cassion a major of infantry, a number of receipts issued in Montreal, a flat of goods purchased at St. Ignace, and a roster of men composing the expedition.

At last from one corner of the pocket I drew forth a number of close ly written pages, evidently the governor's instruction. They were traced in so fine a hand that I was obliged to return beside the fire to decinher their contents. They were written in detail, largely concerned with matters of routine, especially referring to rela tions with the garrison of the fort, and Charlon's authority over De Bangia but the closing paragraph had set deutly been added later, and had personal interest. It read: "Use your discretion as to D'Artigny, but violence will hardly be safe; he is thought too well of by La Salle, and that fox may get Louis' ear again. We find best be cantious. Chevet, however, has no friends, and, I am told, possesses a list of the La Chesnayne property, and other documents which had best be destroyed. Do not fall in this, nor fear results. We have gone too far to healthte now."

I took this page, and thrust it into ny breast. It was not much, and yet, It might prove the one needed link. ran through the packet of letters, but they apparently had no bearing on the Assured that I had overlooked noth ing. I thrust the various articles back, restrapped the bag, and returned to the outer room. As I paused before the fire, someone rapped at the door. stood erect, my fingers gripping the pistol, which I still retained. Again the raps sounded, clearly enough defined in the night, yet not violent or threatening.

"Who is there?" I asked. "Your husband, my dear-Francois

"But why do you come? It was the dedge of De Baugis that I was to be off alone!

"A fair piedge enough, although I was not consulted. From the look of your eyes, little difference if I had been. You are as aweet in disposition Captain de Baugis," I said quiefly, as ever, my dear; yet never mind that -we'll soon settle our case now. warrant you. Meanwhile I am content to wait until my time comes. 'Tis not you I seek tonight, but my dressing > case. "Your dressing case?"

"Ay, you know it well, a brown leather bag I bore with me during our bourney:

"And where is it, monsieur?" "Reneath the bunk in the sleeping om. Pass it out to me, and I will

"Twill be safer if you keep your word," I said quietly, "for I still carry Hugo Chever's platol, and know how to use it. Draw away from the door, monsteur, and I will thrust out the

I lowered the har, opening the door barely wide enough to permit the bag's passage. The light from the fire deamed on the harrel of the pistol held scornfully. " "I'll your game toolght, madame," play my hand. I thank you for the besides, he bore a letter authorizing bag, as it contains my commission, him to take command of all French surcustic smile on De Tonty's thin line By virtue of it I shall assume comcongrutulate you on your lover, ma dame-good night."

! Glanced at My Reflection in the Gians.

I must bave slept from sheer exhaustion, although I made no attempt to leather aside, gaining gilmpse of the lie nown, it was broad daylight when I awake, aroused by pounding on the door. To my inquiry a voice an nonneed food, and I lowered the bur.

venied a pocket in the leather side,) the room, but I suddenly felt courage

"You were not of our party," I said gravely. "Are you a soldler of M. de Bauria?" "No, madame," and he turned facng me, bla countenance a pleasant "I am not a soldler at all, but I erve M. de Tonty."

"Ab, I am glad of that You will bear to your master a message?" "Perhaps, madame," his tone somewhat doubtful. "You are the wife of Monsieur Cassion? "Do not hesitate because of that," I nastened to say, believing I understood with me.

"Yes, madame." "You have served with D'Artigny? You know him well?"

"Three years, madame; twice he saved my life on the great river. M. de Tonty shall receive your message." I could not eat, although I made the indeavor, and finally crossed to the bec." window, opened the heavy wooden dutters, and gazed without. What a narvelous scene that was! Never before had my eyes looked upon so fair view, and I stood slient and fasciery edge of the wast rock into the sion has them on his person." wide valley. Great treetops were beow, and I had to lean far out to see became visible, decked with islands. and winding here and there between in the far distance. I had neglected to bar the door, and as I stood there gazing in breathless fuscination, a sudden step on the floor stood hat in hand.

een no nobler domain."

"It hath a penceful look," I anthe valley?"

"All too true see, yonder, where the smoke still shows, dwelt the Kaskaskins. Not a lodge is left, and the bod les of their dead strew the ground. Along those mendows three weeks twelve tribes of peaceful Indians; to- Mission house, and made report." day those who yet live are fleeing for their lives."

"And this fort, monsieur?" youd the gate. The Rock protects us. de la Durantaye. Neither will oppor madame, yet we are greatly outnum him, so long as he furnishes the proof bered, and with no ammunition to necessary to convict. He will give his which left us thus helpless. Could we chance a soldier or two, who will would be different."

"They are not cowards, then?" invaded this land. "Tis my thought by telling the whole truth." nany of them are hiding now beyond those hills, and may find some way to can do?" reach us. I suspected such an effort reminds me, madame; you sent for

"Yes, M. de Tonty. I can speak to Sleur d'Artigny?" "Falth, I hope I am, madame, but I know not what has got into the ladwill tell me nothing." "I suspected as much, monsieur. It was for that reason I have sent for you. He has not even told you the story of our lourney?" "Ay, as brief as a military reportnot a fact I could not have guessed not discovered. Why is M. Cassion so wild for the ind's blood, and how came dame, to give him your assistance there to be trouble between Rene and "Tis like to be a desperate venture."

the furtrader? Bab! I know the lad is no murderer, but no one will tell me the facts." "Then I will, monsteur," I said gravely. "It was because of my bellef that Sleur d'Artigny would refuse explanation that I sent for you. The truth need not be concenled; not from you, at least, the commander of Fort St. Louis-"

"Pardon, madame, but I am not that, than a dozen men. De Baugis came feet fronting the newcomer, ere J even later, under commission from La Barre, realized it was Cassion who stood but he also had but a handful of fol- there, glaring at us. Behind him two lowers. To save quarrel we agreed to soldiers waited in the sunshine. divide authority, and so got along fair ly well, until M. Cassion arrived with de Tonty?" he exclaimed, with no pregether on the other side and De Banno resistance be made, but, falth, with the indians scattered. I had no power. in my hand. It was the work of an phase. An hour ago M. Cassion as M. Cassion. Madame and I have conwe left Quebec it had been in our listant, and I saw nothing of Cassion, sumed command of the garrison by versed without permission. If that he bers to Australia, England, Italy and but, as the door closed, he laughed virtue of a commission be produced crime, I answer for it now, or when Argentian, and in much larger quantifrom the Governor in Barre, naming you will." blin major of infantry. This gives him he said spitefully, "but fomorrow I rank above Captain de Baugis, and. I read the desire in his eyes, in the troops in this valley, if, is his Judg- robbed him of courage. mend of this Fort St. Louis, and I ment, circumstances rendered if necknow how to deal with murderers. I essary. No doubt he deemed this the he snarled, "or I will have you in the pened along on a high ledge above proper occasion."

"To assure the conviction and death mand now." of D'Artigny?" I asked, as he paused, ["That is your meaning, monsiour?"

"I cannot ree it otherwise." he answered slowly, "although I hesitate to make so grave a charge in your pres | sue of lies." ence, madame. Our situation here is garments-together with a uniform, permitting an orderly to enter, bearing scarcely grave enough to warrant his doubt. But you will sing a different s may, which he deposited on the table | section, for the fort is in no sections song presently. Ay, and it will be her while no friend of mine, is still a fairminded man, and merciful. He cannot my testimony?" be made a tool for any purpose of re-plans." I looked into the soldier's dark, other eyes open that night, my lady. clear-cut face, feeling a confidence in Now will you confess the truth?" him which impelled me to hold out my now to address him in all frankness, spirit reasserting itself as De Tonty "It is true that I am legally the wife of this man of whom you speak, but this only enables me to know his motives better. This condemnation of Sleur d'Artigny is not his plan sione: it was born in the brain of La Barre, and Cassion merely executes his or ders. I have here the written instructions under which he operates."

I held out to him the page from La Barre's letter.

CHAPTER XX.

The Court-Martial. De Tonty took the paper from my hand, glanced at it, then lifted his eyes inquiringly to mine.

"'Tis in the governor's own hand. How came this in your possession?" "I found it in Cassion's private bag his meaning. "While it is true I am last night, under the berth yonder. legally the wife of Francols Cassion. Later he came and carried the bag my sympathies now are altogether away, never suspecting it had been with the Sleur d'Artigny. I would opened. His commission was there have you ask M. de Tonty to confer also. Read it, monsieur."

He did so slowly, carefully, seeming to weigh every word, his eyes darkening, and a flush creeping into his swarthy cheeks.

"Madame" he evelalmed at last 'I care not whether the man be your husband, but this is a damnable conspiracy, hatched months ago in Que-

I bowed my bead.

"Beyond doubt, monsteur." "And you found nothing more-no documents taken from Hugo Chevet?" "None, monsieur; they were either ated. My window opened to the destroyed in accordance with La westward, and I gazed down from the Barre's Instructions, or else M. Cas-

"But I do not understand the reason for such foul treachery. What octhe slivery waters lapping the base curred back in New France to cause of the precipice, but, a little beyond, the murder of Chevet and this attempt the full whith of the noble stream to convict D'Artiguy of the crime?" "Sit here, monsleur," I said, my voice trembling, "and I will tell you green-clad banks, until it disappeared the whole story. I must tell you, for there is no one else in Fort St. Louis whom I can trust." I told the tale simply, concealing nothing, not even my growing love for caused me to turn in alarm. My eyes D'Artigny. The man listening inspired accountered those of De Tonty, who my utmost confidence-I sought his respect and faith. As I came to the end "Tis a fair view, madame," he said for a moment he remained motionless politely. "In all my travels I have and silent, his eyes grave with thought. "'Tis a strange, sad case," he said finally, "and the end is hard to deterswered, still struggling with the mem- mine. I believe you, madame, and ory. "Can it be true the savages hold honor your choice. The case is strong against D'Artigny; even your testimony is not for his defense. Does M. Cassion know you saw the young man that night?" "He has dropped a remark or two which show suspicion. Possibly some since there were the happy villages of one of the men saw me outside the "Then he will call you as a witness. If I know the nature of Cassion his plan of trial is a mere form, "Safe enough, I think, although no although doubtless he will ask the one of us can venture ten yards be presence of Captain de Baugis and M. waste. Twas the surprise of the raid evidence, and call the Indian, and perhave been given time to gather our wear to whatever he wishes. If needfriendly Indians together, the story ed. he may bring you in also to strengthen the case. D'Artigny will make no defense, because he has no "Not with proper leadership. We witnesses, and because he has a fool have seen them fight often since we notion that he might compromise you

"Then there is no hope; nothing we

"No, madame; not now. I shall not last night, when I sent out the rescue be consulted, nor asked to be present. party which brought you in. Ah, that I am under strict order from La Saile not to oppose La Barre's officers, and even if I were disposed to disobey my chief. I possess no force with which to you frankly? You are the friend of act. I have but ten men on whom I could rely, while they number over forty." He leaned closer whispering "Our policy is to wait, and act after the prisoner has been condemned."

"Av. there lies the only hope. There is one man here who can turn the trick. He is D'Artigny's comrade and friend. Airendy he has outlined a plan to me, but I gave no encouragement There is a secret here, which I have Yet, now that I know the truth, I shall not oppose. Have you courage, ma-

"How? You mean a rescue?"

sense of fear. "Yes, monsieur. Who is the man I am to trust?" "Francols de Bolsrondet, the

I drew a deep breath, but with no who led the rescue party last night." "A gallant lad." "Ay, a gentleman of France, a daring heart. Tonight-" The door opened, and the figure of a man stood outlined against the bright-La Salle left me in command with less er glow without. De Tonty was on his the inflammation, pain and annoyance.

American manufacturers of musical instruments, with an annual output "What is the meaning of this, M. his party. Then the olds were alto- tense at friendliness. "A rather early eign countries. American pianos are morning call, regarding which I was chiefly exported to Canada, where they gls assumed command by sheer force not even consulted. Have bushands constitute about 90 per cent of the toof rifles. 'Twas La Salle's wish that no rights in this wilderness paradise?" tal imports of that class to Great Brit-"Such rights as they uphold," re ain, for reshipment to other parts of turned the Italian, erect and motion-This morning things have taken a new less. "I am always at your service, trul and South America. Our player

> It was in Cassion's heart to strike swift clutch at his sword bilt; but the " Tis best you curb your tengue, guardhouse with D'Artigny. I com-"So I hear, Doubtless you could convict me as easily." "What do you mean?" "Only that your whole case is a tis-

"Pah! you have her word for it, no The semoval of these, however, re Without speaking he turned to leave danger from the Iroquois. De Baugis, testimony which will hang the villain." and cane origin.

"What is this you say, monsieur-

"Just that-the tale of what you venue. This truth Major Cossion has saw to the Mission garden at St. Igdoubtless learned, and hence assumes nace. Sacre, that shot hits, does it! command bimself to carry out his You thought me asleep, and with no knowledge of your escapade, but I had

> "I shall conceal nothing, monsieur." "Twill be best that you make no attempt," he sneered, his old braggart kept silent. "I have guard here to escort you to the commandant's office." "You do me honor." I turned to De Tonty. "Shall I go, monsieur?"

> "I think it best, madame." be replied soberly, his dark eyes contemptuously surveying Cassion. "To refuse would only strengthen the case against the prisoner. M. Cassion will not, I am sure, deny me the privilege of accompanying you. Permit me to offer my I did not giance toward Cassion, but felt no doubt as to the look on his face; yet be would think twice before laying hand on this stern soldler who had offered me protection. The guard at the door fell aside promptly, and permitted us to pass. Some order was hind with rides at trail. Once in the open I became, for the first time, aware of irregular rifle firing, and observed in surprise men posted upon a narrow staging along the side of the log stockade.

"Is the fort being attacked?" asked.

"There has been firing for some days," he answered, "but no real attack. The savages merely hide you der amid the rocks and woods, and strive to keep as from venturing down the trall. Twice we have made sortle, and driven them away, but 'tis a useless waste of fighting." He called to a man posted above the gate: "How is it this morning, Intes?"

The soldier glauced about cautious ly, keeping his head below cover. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Some years ago Lord Kitchener's name was given to a kind of wheat that was introduced by him into South Africa. The story is told in the Daily London Chronicle. While Kitchener was in India some of the acquaintances he had made in South Africa wrote to him that their wheat was suffering from rust and that they had heard that Tibetan wheat was immunfrom this disease. Could be send them a few bushels? He sent the wheat and that was an end of the matter, as he thought. Some years afterward he was at Nairold, and saw a few acres of growing wheat, named Kitchener wheat. He learned that the seed had come from a part of South Africa. 2,000 miles distant-the offspring of the marriage of his Tibetan wheat with a native variety. "So," said Lord Kitchener, "Just as my grandfather. Doctor Chevallier, gave his name to a famous barley, mine is now attached to a special kind of wheat."

Worth Knowing. Gumbolls are most painful and re sult generally from a decayed root which causes the inflammation and ab seess that resolves itself into a gum boll. Foment the outside of the face with a hot camomile and poppy head fomation and apply a small white brend-and-milk poultice to the gum boil. Renew frequently. So soon as the pain and swelling have disappeared it is best to have the tooth re moved. In cases where decayed and ulcerated roots have been allowed to remain, disease of the Jawhone has resuited. Usually when the sufferer takes cold there will be a renewal of Musical Instrument Output.

valued at about $100,000,000, experi only $300,000 worth annually to for the world, and for reshipment to Cenplanes are sent in about equal num ties to Canada.

Is There a Moral Here?

In Friday morning's fletion story a young weman and her lover had quarreled; she sat moodly under a tree on the creek bank. The lover hapher and stumbled over a big stone The stone rolled down the bank and struck the moody young woman in the back. She sprang up, recognized her lover and forgave him, Moral; When she won't listen to reason, sonk her in the back.-Kansus City Star.

The world's sugar production is about equally divided between beet

INTERNATIONAL

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Course of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.) (Copyright, 1816, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 8

PAUL BEFORE FELIX.

LESSON TEXT-Acts 24.

GOLDEN TEXT-Herein I also exercise myself to have a conscience void of of-fense toward God and men always.—Acts 24:15.

This is a court scene, and it might be well with certain classes to introduce the lesson by describing such a gathering. The lesson occurred five days after the last lesson, and twelve days after Paul reached Jerusalem, bearing the collection for the poor. The place, Caesarea, was the Roman capital of Juden.

I. The Prisoner's Examination (vv. 1-a). In addition to the Roman governor, Felix, attired in his gorgeous official regalia, on a platform nearby. were the high priest of the Jews, in his highly colored and jeweled robes, the lawyer, Tertulius, in his Roman toga, and the elders of the Sanhedrin who had come down from Jerusalem to be witnesses against Paul. Of Tertulius It was said that, by his persuasive tongue, he could make white seem black, and could therefore more easily make it appear that Paul was "a danger to the Roman power, and not merely a turbulent and renegade Jew." The judge, Felix, was an exceptionally bad governor, who two years later was recalled by Nero to Rome. The Inference of verse two is that Paul was an inciter of rebellion and robberies, but the exact charges were three-fold: (See vv. 5-6) (a) that Paul was a mover of insurrection; (b) that he was a ringlender of a sect of Nazarenes who were causing trouble in the province: and (c) that he had profaned the Jewish temple at Jerusalem. The charge of insurrection would be espe cially obnoxious to Fellx who had just been praised for keeping peace in his dominion. That of being a leader of heresy was not serious, for the Romans had no desire to interfere between one Jewish sect and another, but it led to the last one, viz., profuning the temple. The Romans and legalized the Jewish ritual, and for Paul to profane the holy place would be a serious outrage. The weakness of Tertullus' case was that he produced no evidence to support his charges. The accusers were there, but they had no witnesses,

11. The Prisoner's Defense (vv. 10-21). Paul cheerfully made his defense, for he knew the Jews and their customs. and that Fellx had married a Jewess. (v. 24). We might consider this defense first negatively and then positively. On the negative side, Paul answers each charge scrintlin. In the first place there had not been time for him to cause an insurrection (v. 11). Going back over these days; (1) his arrival in Jerusalem (21:15); (2) his appearance before James (21:18); (3. 4. 5 and 6), the days of his vow (Ch. 21:26, 27); (7) his arrest; (8) his appearance be fore the Sanhedrin; (9) the conspiracy and his deliverance; (10, 11, 12 and 13) in Caesarea (See Ch. 24:1). Paul's statement showed that the whole story of his experience was fresh in the memories of both friends and foes. It was the Jews who did the stirring up. Paul answers the second charge by acknowledging (vv. 14-16) that he belonged to the Christian way of salvation, but denied that this was heresy, Paul was a true Jew and a good Pharisee, for (1) he worshiped the same God (v. 14); (2) he believed in the Jewish law and prophets. From them he knew he could prove that Jesus was the Messiah. (3) He agreed with the Pharisces (v. 15) in hope to ward God, a resurrection from the dend and immortal life. Paul's life was "void of offense" toward God in heart and worship, and toward men as shown in good deeds. It was for this that he exercised himself. Literally, he worked upon the raw material, disciplining and training it. Prul answers the third charge by a simple denial that it had actually taken place, and calls for witnesses. Positively, Paul explains that he had followed the God of his fathers. that he believed in fulfilled prophecyliterally the resurrection of Jesus from the dead-that he came to Jerusalem with alms for the poor, and, as before the council, he stands upon his integrity. III. The Judge's Delay (vv. 22-27).

of that way." We believe he had se cured this knowledge from Philip, the evangelist, and from Cornelius, the Roman centurion, both of whom lived in Caesarea. By deferring his decision. Felix avoided an outrageous injustice to Paul, and at the same time gave serious offense to the troublesome Jews who knew of his evil conduct From verse twenty-three we see that Paul was given liberty, literally such indulgence in freedom as would be consistent with his safety. Luke, the physteinn, and Philip, the evangelist, visited him here, bringing food, books and letters. After a time Felix and ble wife, Drusilla, sent for Paul to talk with him "concerning the faith in Christ." Drusilin was a daughter of Herod Agrippa I (vv. 12-23), and a sister of Herod II (See Ch. 20). She was a beautiful woman, much younger than Felix who was possibly about sixty years of age. She and her only child perished in the eruption of Vesuvius A. D. 79. Paul before Felix emphasized three points. (1) Righteousness -right principles, right conduct, integrity and justice-duties which man owes to man. (2) Paul reasoned of temperance, literally self-control, Temperance, as here used, is ability to guide and restrain one's emotions and poetites; having the passions and powers of the soul under the control of reason and conscience. (3) Paul preached of a judgment to come, where the rewards for virtue and the punish ment for sin and eritae would be mani

Felix had a "more perfect knowledge

What the Doctor Knows

KIDNEYS MUST EE RIGHT TO INSURE HEALTH.

Few people realize to what extent their bealth depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness, makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot readily be brought back to health and streagth. be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected as abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's Disease, which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in one year, in the State of New York alone. Therefore, it is particularly necessary to pay more attention to the health of these important organs.

An ideal herbal expressed that he to the serious properties of the seri

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable auccess as a kidney remely is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. The mild and healing influence of this preparation, in most cases, is soon real-ized, according to sworn statements and verified testimony of those who have used the remedy. When your kidneys require attention, get Swamp-Root at once from any pharmacy. It is sold by every druggist is bottles of two sizes—50c and $1.00.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing he sure and mention this paper. Adv. The Ruling Passion.

"Who are those gentlemen having lunch together?" "A party of scientists." "I don't suppose a low-browed individual could understand what they are talking about." "He might. I overheard one of them just now ask the waiter if there was a ball game today."

Wright's Indian Pogetable Pills have steed the rest of time. Test them yours if now. Send for sample to 372 Pearl street, N. Y.—Adv.

No Fun in That. "Why did you brenk the engagement?" "Well, my flancee got to Imitating one of these movie queens, 8hs thought it was cute to shoot me a swift kiss under the ear."

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio. - "I had almost give up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could act eat anything without hurting my stomach. I coull not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat not chicken. From 173 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."-

Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St.,

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-

nd contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the That is why Mrs. Barlow, & chronic invalid, recovered so completely. It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-

Don't Persecute Your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE Genuine must bear Signature Brent Good

Hale's Honey Of Horehound and Tar

A tonic, expectorant and laxative. Contains no opium nor anything injurious. Sold by all druggists. Try Pike's Tostlanche Drops

Every Woman Wants Paxline ANTISEPTIC POWDER

FOR PERSONAL HYGIENE Dissolved in water for douches stop polivic catarrh, ulceration and inflammation. Recommended by Lydin E Pinkham Med. Co, for ten years
A healing wonder for mani catarrh sore throat and sore eyes. Economical this crimedeary changing and pensistal proviSample Free. Son all charging, ar portion in mai. The Passes Tollet Company, Busine, then

WHY NOTTRY POPHAM'S ASTHMA MEDICINA Oives Prompt and Positive Relief is Ero Case. Sold by Druggists. Prior M.St. Trial Package by Mail 10c. WILLIAMS INFO. CO., Props. Clereland, C