Pigs and Kerosene

Agricultural colleges experiment to ascertain the best feeding methods for pigs. By scientific study they determine what will practically assure success and profits.

What has this to do with kerosene? Just this; scientific research by experts has produced a kerosene for you to feed your lamps and oil stoves—a kerosene so highly refined, so pure in form, that it is called to distinguish it from ordinary kinds. It will not smell, smoke or char the wicks. You can have a brilliant yet soothing light and a steady, room-filling heat without fussing with burners, trimming wicks and turning the flame up and down. When used in lanterns it gives a clear, far-reaching light. And it costs not a penny more than ordinary kinds. Always ask for it by name.

Watch for the sign—Atlantic Rayolight Oil For Sale Here. You're likely to find it a reliable place to do most of your buying. When the wind howls, and the snow packs along the windows, it's a heap o' comfort to have a barrel of Atlantic Rayolight Oil on hand. Don't take it home unless the brand name is on the barrel.

Corrected Obituary.

The following account of the death of Talmage Barton, near Crystal Springs, which occurred October 9th, has been furnished by relatives of the deceased:

On the morning of his death, Talmage started to Everett with a load of apples. His father, Isaac M. Barton, intended going along, but delayed starting when Talmage and the team left home. The father caught up with the team before it had reached the township road, and found his son hanging down over the front of the wagon with his head just under the edge of the wheel. Although his head was badly injured, it is not known whether he died suddenly before falling, or whether he was killed by the fall. Talmage was subject to epileptic convulsions, but had escaped them for a long time, and it is supposed that he was seized with one and fell from the wagon. His age was 23 years, 2 months, and 4 days.

Talmage leaves to mourn his death his young wife and a baby that was eleven months old on the day of the funeral;

also, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac M. Barton, near Crystal Springs, and a sister, Mrs. Roy Helsel, of Frankstown, Pa. Funeral was held on the following Wednesday, interment being made at Akersville graveyard. The shocking accident has called forth the deepest sympathy of the neighborhood for the bereaved relatives.
