Mrs. Harvey Bender entertained a party of her friends at her home on North Second street last Thursday evening.

F. K. Stevens, Dentist, at Hustontown, Friday and Saturday, February 9th and 10th; at Needmore, Monday, February 26th.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Forner returned to their home in Scotland last Sunday after having spent several days among friends in this community.

HIDES.—Frank B. Sipes pays the highest market price for beef hides at their butcher shop in McConnellsburg, also highest price paid for calf skins, sheepskins and tallow.

To-day many of our roads carry a motor traffic far in excess of all classes carried 12 years ago. At the present time there are about 2,500,000 motor vehicles in use on our public roads, or about one motor vehicle for every mile of road.

Rife's woods southeast of Spring Grove, Pa., is the roosting place for many thousands of crows. A frequenter of the timberland claimed that more than 100,000 of the birds make their home there. In the morning shortly before sunrise, their cawing can be heard at long distances. It is said by people residing in the vicinity that when anyone goes through the woods at night and strikes a match the crows rise from the trees in masses. Persons in the vicinity assert that they never have seen an equal number of crows roost in one place.

Nothing to Worry About

"Oh, George!" sobbed the bride after the ceremony, "I have a confession to make. I have always been afraid to tell you that I don't know how to cook."

"That'll be all right," replied George. "With the salary I'm making we'll never have anything to cook."—From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that after thirty days from the date of this notice viz: January 25, 1917, the County Commissioners of Fulton County, Pa., will direct the Constable of each township and borough in the said County to kill all dogs not wearing a license tag for 1917, and all unlicensed dogs found therein.

F. M. LODGE,
CHAS. W. SCHOOLEY,
A. K. NESBIT,
Commissioners.

Winter Poultry Menu.

Sprouted oats, cabbage or mangels for succulence should supplement the grain feed given to poultry, especially during the winter season. To sprout oats, they should be soaked in luke warm water for 24 hours and spread out in shallow box in layer one inch deep. The oats should not be fed until it is four to five inches high. About one square inch per hen daily, is the amount recommended for feeding by the Pennsylvania State College. If the oats mold, ten drops of formaldehyde should be added to a bucket of water when the oats are soaked. Cabbage and mangels should be suspended by a rope or wire so that the hens will secure exercise in jumping for them. Grit and oyster shell should be kept in hoppers or boxes at all times. Granulated charcoal is beneficial in absorbing gases and correcting disorders of the digestive system in hens. It may either be mixed with mash or fed alone in hoppers.

Does His Duty.

There is an assessor in a neighboring county that is certainly doing business with a proper spirit. When he goes out to assess and three or four dogs meet him at the gate he proceeds calmly to the proprietor of the farm, makes his assessment and asks how many dogs he has. If the proprietor says he has none, and that a few dogs just "hang around the place" Mr. Assessor just pulls out a revolver and speedily dispatches the canines in sight. He says he may not be elected assessor again but he is going to get the dog tax of his township while he is on the job.

The Inducement to Business Ability.

A Socialist member has introduced into the Pennsylvania Legislature a bill placing a graduated tax on incomes so that no one would ever receive more than $10,000 a year. This is typical of a type of proposition that is growing more and more common. The federal income tax has already been increased. Efforts to advance it still further will certainly be made.

The Scriptures lay down the proposition that to whom much is given, of him shall much be required. The man of wealth gained his dollars not wholly by his own industry. He had given to him a higher degree of power and skill. In so far as this was inborn, he is entitled to no credit for it, and should be willing to contribute according to his ability to pay.

But we must be careful not to kill the goose that lays the golden egg. Savage tribes live according to Socialistic principles with their property in common. They don't rise to civilization until they are willing to encourage individual initiative. The moment they give a man what he earns that moment education becomes possible and human comforts multiply.

The able business executive pays his way, if he is honest. A good manager can double the production of a loosely run plant. It is a business proposition to let him keep his small proportion of the profits even if it does make him wealthy. However he can afford to pay heavily toward taxes and should give liberally to all philanthropies.

A heavy tax on wealth is legitimate provided it does not check business enterprise and discourage men of superior ability from exercising those powers. But the public should see that there is a limit, beyond which taxes would not be profitable to the community.

Began as Schoolteacher.

It is not necessarily surprising but of every given profession, former or present, schoolteachers predominate among the popular writers of today. Among those who have deserted their former work for the more congenial and profitable work of writing are James Lane Allen, who was a public school teacher and later a professor of Latin in a small college. Parker Filmore was a government teacher in the Philippines. Frances Hodgson Burnett was a country school teacher on a small salary when she began writing stories, and rumor has it that the stamps with which her first contributions were sent away were money obtained from picking berries. She found a timely and valued friend in Charles J. Peterson of Philadelphia who paid her liberally for her writing and gave her a chance to get before the public.

Physical Training and Business Success.

College life is looked at by the ordinary run of people as a soft snap, a sheltered, protected leisurely life. It is thought of as a kind of intellectual Pullman car, in which professors and tutors pull their relaxed passengers over all the heavy grades of learning. Yet the college student can be strenuous enough for the causes that he holds dear.

He may not burn much midnight electricity. But if he is playing on a 'varsity team he will submit to a code of rules that the ordinary boy would call barbarous.

Looking over the regulations for a college team, it was noted the other day that the boy must be in bed at 10 P. M. Sweets, fried foods and many other commonplaces of the dinner table, were cut out. Not many young men in business would thus limit themselves for the price of business success. Business failures are very apt to be due to physical causes. People can't stand the strain of worries and rush times. Just on the point of gripping that slippery and elusive creature Success the coy and treacherous prize slips out of their weary grasp. The sanitariums are filled with business men taking baths and massage and osteopathy because their nerves went bad.

Of course people won't hold themselves down to strict rules of living. And a routine life with no breaks is not wholesome in the long run. But most young men are far too careless in these matters. They feed themselves as if they had the stomachs of a camel. They sit up to all hours as making them out for gay sports and young bloods. But that game can be played only about so far. It has its sharp limits, as they all find out. A little more of the spirit of the college training table would do them a lot of good.
