Eggs fit for Hatching

Eggs for hatching should be selected and only those having normal shape and weighing at least two ounces, with clean, smooth, strong shells should be used. Cracked eggs as well as dirty eggs, rough shells, weak shells, abnormal shapes, and extremely long or short eggs should be avoided.
There is no means of determining whether or not an egg is fertile except by incubation. The fresher the egg, the better it is for hatching. The vitality, however is lowered but little when the egg is held for 10 days or two weeks. Extension Circular No. 47, of the Pennsylvania State College school of agriculture and experiment station states that eggs for hatching should be kept in a dry, cool place (50 to 60 degrees F.) laid on their sides, and turned occasionally. The germ starts to develop at 68 degrees F. In cold weather eggs should be collected as often as possible, to prevent chilling.

How They Raised Missionary Money.

Easter Sunday, 1916 each pupil of the Philanthra Class in the M. E. Sunday School at Hustontown was given a nickel by their teacher, Mrs. H. C. McClain to be used as each thought best to make the most out of it. The members of the class were called together the other evening at the home of their teacher to hear a report from each scholar, as to how much money they had raised, and how they raised it. Some had raised chickens; others, turkeys; and others sweet-potatoes, beans, lettuce—crocheted doilies, etc. When their money was counted it made almost $20. After refreshment were served all went home feeling it was time and money well spent for the Master.

Bad Trade.

In any town, no matter how prosperous, there is always a certain proportion of merchants who complain of bad trade. They make a melancholy report of local business conditions. Nothing doing is the burden of their refrain. So far as they are concerned, there is no money in circulation.

Yet the currents of prosperity are flowing by their door. Hundreds or thousands of people pass their stores every day, most of them with money in their pockets, bound either for some other local place of business, or on their way out of town to buy.

There is plenty of money and plenty of prosperity at this time. If business is dull or if it does not grow, there must be something the matter with us or our methods.

Usually the trouble is that the public has a kind of prejudice against such stores. Somehow, it has got the impression that they are not up to date and are running along in the same old fashioned way that they did years ago.

The trouble in such a case is almost invariably that that store has done nothing to bring itself before public attention. It simply opens its doors in the morning, and expects the public attention. The public is not built that way. It does not care much to visit stores unless it feels in advance that it is going to buy something there. People hate to go into a store and then walk out without buying, particularly in their home town where they are known. So having this impression in their minds a little unfavorable to such stores they simply keep away from them or only visit them when they want something quick in an emergency.

An impression of that kind can be dispelled by advertising. In a short time a campaign of publicity gives an impression that a merchant has woken up. It makes him look like a live one. People begin to think that after all he may be up-to-date, and they come around to look at what he has.
