Another gratifying example of loyalty was demonstrated at the U. S. Navy Recruiting Office, Little Rock, Arkansas when Mr. J. L. Leigh applied for enlistment in the U. S. Navy.

Mr. Leigh requested that he be enlisted at once and sent to the largest Battleship afloat for service on that vessel, and he was greatly disappointed when informed by the Recruiting Officer that he exceeded the required age limit by forty some odd years, he being sixty-nine years of age.

Mr. Leigh is a warrior of experience, having enlisted in the Confederate Army at the age of thirteen and having served for four years, which ended in April 1865, under General Lee, at Appomattox.

It is most gratifying, in these times of need to find such loyal spirited in the "Boys of 1861" and such an example as shown by our worthy veteran, Mr. Leigh, will no doubt find a like response by the "Boys of 1917."

AFTER EIGHT YEARS

McConnellsburg Testimony Remains Unshaken

Time is the best test of truth. Here is a McConnellsburg story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point which will come straight home to many of us.

Miss Susan Peightel, McConnellsburg, says: "I was in poor health for some time and I believed that weak kidneys caused the trouble. I suffered greatly from severe pains in my back, which often darted into my head. I often became dizzy and had chills. I was losing strength daily and felt poorly in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Trout's Drug Store, brought me quick relief." (Statement given November 5, 1907)

Over six years later, Miss Peightel said: "Whenever I need a backache or kidney medicine, I use Doan's Kidney Pills. They relieve me."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Miss Peightel has twice publicly recommended. Foster Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. Advertisement.

Shall the World Starve?

From Public Ledger
That the total stock of food today available in the allied world will not without rigorous saving last until September, when we shall be face to face with the consequences of last year's poor harvest: that there has been a diversion of man power from agriculture all over the world, due in Europe to the war and in America to the impetus of the war industries, which have drained the farms of their help—these are facts on which Herbert C. Hoover bases his appeal to plant everywhere and his statement that we "stand a grave chance of losing the war, because our allies cannot fight without food."

The New York Department of Agriculture reports that out of 22,000,000 acres of farming land in the State only 8,250,000 acres are being tilled. Only 375,000 out of more than 10,000,000 inhabitants of New York State—a little more than 10 per cent—are in the farming occupation. New York is one of the great agricultural states of the East. These figures are typical of the agricultural situation in a large part of the United States, showing a depleted force to cultivate an area that is not nearly half the potential farming and gardening acreage of the United States.

Let us face the facts frankly. Under the present American agricultural system this nation is going to fall objectly in the most vital undertaking of the war—the supply of foodstuffs to the Allies. Already the Germans are taunting us and their taunts are bitter. This is a giant nation but it is weak in the stomach. It has given itself up to all sorts of other developments while it has forgotten the primal requisite of providing the material means of existence. But we are no longer lethargic, Mr. Hoover's is not a voice crying in the wilderness. From Belgium, from Serbia, from Poland, from Russia, France and England voices have multiplied and echoed with the cry, "Give us food!" Shall we say in response, "Our fertile acres will not yield food, for men will not labor on them?"

IS THIS TOWN A WAREHOUSE SUBURB OR NOT

By HONORE WILLISIE, Editor of the Delineator.

Two years ago the Delineator started an architectural series which we called The House That Grows. The plan was to present a house in three stages of growth, each stage being complete and habitable. One could live in the first stage until financially able to add the second, then the third. The idea was to satisfy the American desire for growth and improvement without sacrificing America's great need for permanent homes.

For the lack of homes is one of America's fundamental weaknesses. It goes hand in hand with our lack of family pride, and this breeds inevitably a lack of civic pride.

Community pride follows the love of home as surely as fine growth follows rich planting. And community pride dies where there is no community of interests.

The great complaint against the average suburban town is that it lacks interest in itself. You can't get the merchants and the townspeople to cooperate to any extent.

And the stores are poor and the suburban population is shifting and unreliable.

Doesn't this apply as well to the towns given over to mail order buying? Do you want your town, the town in which you have started your home, to thrive and improve? Well, it won't thrive and improve unless the tradespeople in your town are getting and giving a fair deal. Mail order buying turns your town into a suburb of a great city mail order house. It is taking out of your town the life blood, the circulation of which enriches your home as well as those of your neighbors. It doesn't pay. That is why I'm glad The Delineator has excluded mail order announcements from the advertising columns. It has removed from our readers' homes a powerful temptation to buy away from home.

ROYAL RAIMENT FROM AMERICAN SPECIFICATIONS

Royal wardrobes from American dress patterns? Ridiculous! Nevertheless it is a fact that for years the nobility of England, France, Germany and other European powers have been fashioning the garments of their women folks from identically the same tissue paper pattern that is on sale in practically every nook and corner of the United States.

The funny part of it is that, while the world recognizes that Paris originates style, few people realize that the distribution of style information and the adaptation of Paris creations to the world's millions of well-dressed women are entirely in the hands of Americans.

There is one sixteen story building in New York city entirely devoted to the business of making dress patterns and publishing magazines which go to the four corners of the earth regularly with style information gathered from the fashion centers of the world, particularly Paris. These magazines not only are read in the United States to the extent of 1,500,000 a month, but the counterpart of one of them goes regularly to England, France, Germany, Italy and the Spanish speaking countries in editions especially prepared in those languages.

Furthermore, the paper patterns, which reproduce the fashions illustrated and explained in this magazine, also go to all of these countries, where they outsell all similar magazines and patterns indigenous to those lands.

And the best part of it all is that the woman who lives in Paris, Tex., is enabled to buy the very latest pattern from the house of Butterick at the same time that the woman of Paris, France, is seeking the same pattern in the Avenue de l'Opera shop of the concern. An interesting exhibit at the New York plant is a collection of original letters from titled ladies of Europe ordering Butterick patterns or the foreign editions of The Delineator. There are so many of these letters from French, English, German, Austrian, Russian and Scandinavian noblemen that the eleven volume bound volumes in which they are kept are known as "Butterick's Peerage." One letter is from the British Royal household, advising that the present Prince of Wales as a child was dressed by Butterick patterns. This supremacy of a United States institution in fashion distribution is certainly gratifying to every red blooded American who believes in "America Over All."

Everglade Independence. The way to get ahead is to edge ahead by an inch and hold on to that inch until you can edge in another. The man who is a dollar ahead of his debts is an independent creditor.—Tarp Springs Leader.

Frogs Protected. In France, frogs are protected by law as much as fish are in this country. There is a closed season, and hunting them by night is forbidden at any time.

Hesitating Mexico

From the Independent
President Carranza's evident desire to keep Mexico neutral in the war between Germany and the United States may be overborne by the influence of the war party if reports from Mexican sources are to be trusted. Several of the leading Constitutionalists are known to be pro-German in sympathy and are also very much tempted by the offer of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico, as well as the possibility of expansion to the south at the expense of British Honduras and perhaps of Guatemala. The nations of Central America are, in varying degrees, in sympathy with the United States or under American diplomatic influence, and it is probable that in the event of trouble with Mexico we can count on allies to the south. German residents of Guatemala and other Central American republics are now concentrating in Mexico but whether as refugees or as recruits for an army of invasion of the United States is uncertain. General Murguia is sending a large part of the federal army to northern Mexico to watch conditions on the American border and several recent attempts have been made to smuggle arms to some port on the western coast. But should the Mexican Government take an anti-American stand it will be due less to its own initiative or the machinations of German residents than to the action of rebel leaders.
