House Party,
The Misses Mildred Jarrett, of Fort Loudon, Nellie Rice, of York, Anna Garrett, of Waynesboro, Edythe Hippensteele, of Carlisle, and Elizabeth McCune, of Shippensburg, came to McConnellsburg yesterday to be the guests of Miss Jean Johnston until the end of this week, at a house party.

Women Give Out.

Housework is hard enough when healthy. Every McConnellsburg woman who is having backache, blue and nervous spells, dizzy headaches and kidney or bladder troubles, should be glad to heed this woman's experience:
Mrs. William Miller, 416 Broad St., Chambersburg, Pa., says: "from over-work and taking a little cold, my back became very stiff and painful. When I tried to stoop over, I had a sharp catch in my back and later, a steady, dull ache settled just over my hips. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills at a time when I could hardly get up out of my chair. I finally began using them and they gave me relief. Continued use put me on my feet again, so that I can now do all my own work."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Miller uses Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Canning Without Sugar.

Sugar frequently soars to a price too high to use at canning time. Canning without sugar is merely a matter of adding boiling water instead of sirup and finishing in the usual manner. The process is urged and highly recommended by State College.

Fruit should be graded for size and ripeness. Clean by placing in a strainer and pouring boiling water over it; pack carefully in jars and add boiling water to fill the jars, put on rubbers and cover jars lightly. The jars should then be placed in a wash boiler with false bottom, or similar container, and sterilized thirty minutes, counting the time from the moment the water in the boiler begins to boil. After sterilizing jars should be removed and sealed.

Extension Circulars 44 and 62, of the Pennsylvania State College, contain complete information on canning.

WEST DUBLIN.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reed, son Arthur, and Mr. Reed's two sisters Mrs. Esh and Mrs. Cann, all of Juniata county motored to the home of their cousin E. H. Kirk Wednesday of last week where they spent the night.

Postmaster W. K. Speer, wife and daughter Alice, and Miss Alice Michaels—all of Everett—and Miss Lois Irwin, of Washington, were guests in the home of E. H. Kirk and family Saturday night and part of Sunday.

Mrs. George H. King and daughter Margaret spent last week at the home of Mrs. King's parents Mr. and Mrs. Scott Brant, near Dane.

Miss McQuade, of McConnellsburg, was a guest in the home of Mrs. Alice Clevenger last Sunday and attended Sunday school with them.

Most Too Much.

It was told by one of our young bloods who has recently embarked in the dry goods business as a clerk, that a young lady went in to the store last week and asked him if he had "any of those elastic bands capable of being elongated and adjusted at pleasure, and used by the feminine portion of mankind for putting around the lower extremities of their locomotive members to keep in the proper position and the required altitude habiliments of their tibias." The clerk is contemplating going on a sheep ranch.

Harvest Home Picnic.

The annual Harvest Home Picnic will be held in Sloan's Woods, in Ayr township, tomorrow (Friday August 10th).

J. A. Herr, one of the State agricultural workers, will be present to address the people. A band will furnish music.

The picnic is always looked forward to with interest, not only on account of the good dinners and the social opportunities but questions of vital importance to our farming interests are discussed by a representative of the State Agricultural Department.

Good Work Done by Amateurs.
Do not leave experiments with plants to professionals. Much of the best work in the improvement of plants and flowers has come through the work of amateurs. The latter class traveling abroad have also been first to send valuable plant introduction to the home land.

SEE BEAUTY IN MUSTACHE

Ainu Women Tattoo the "Decorations" Both on Their Upper and Lower Lips.

The Ainu, the "Celtic" race of Japan, live in the island of Yeddo, although the race has become so reduced that there are not more than sixteen or seventeen thousand of them left in the country. The most noticeable peculiarity about Ainu women is that they have tattooed upon their upper and lower lips what resembles a mustache. The women are not considered attractive, and their matrimonial prospects are quite injured, without this decoration. The mustache is begun when the girl is quite a child. It is done gradually, a little each year, until it extends partly across the cheek, the material used being the soot from burning birch bark. The face is cut and the black rubbed in. Afterward it is washed in a solution of ash-bark liquor to fix the color. The Ainu women are usually finely formed, straight and well-developed, with small hands and feet. Their eyes are a beautiful brown, their hair black and most luxuriant, and their complexion olive, with often a deep, rich color in their cheeks. The native cloth—of which their garments are made—is woven from the fiber of the bark of the elm tree.

LIVED AN ADVENTUROUS LIFE

Captain Selous Completely Happy When He Was Entirely Out of Touch With Civilization.

The remarkable career of the late Captain Selous, D. S. O., the famous hunter and explorer, who at the age of sixty-five died fighting for his country, fills every schoolboy with a longing desire for adventure.

He was only twenty years of age when he went to Matabeleland, in days when railways were unknown there, and when the interior of the country was a sealed book to the European. For years he was in unknown countries, hunting elephants, lions and other animals, and at one period he was nearly three years without seeing a newspaper, a telegram, or any kind of money. Yet he was perfectly happy. He spent nearly a quarter of a century of his life penetrating the interior of South Africa. Then he went to Alaska on a 15,000-mile tour in search of moose and caribou.

It is not generally known that he was the original of the daring, shrewd, dryly humorous Allan Quatermain of Rider Haggard's famous novel, "King Solomon's Mines."

USES OF WOOD PRODUCTS

General Public Not Thoroughly Familiar With the Variety of Ways in Which It Is Employed.

There is a far greater variety of uses for wood products than the public realizes, and at the present time the discovery of new and interesting applications is progressing rapidly, through the efforts of investigators, many of whom are employed by our government. Powder for munitions or blasting, disinfectants for protection against disease and artificial silk for clothing are among the products obtained from wood in whole or in part, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The acetone used as a solvent in making nitrocellulose powders is derived from nitric acid, a product of hardwood distillation. Black walnut is so much in demand for gunstocks that other woods, especially birch, are being substituted. It is stated on good authority that in Europe there is a shortage of willow for making wooden legs. The forest-products laboratory at Madison has conducted extensive experiments in the production of grain, or ethyl, alcohol from wood, and has had some success in raising the yield and lowering the cost of production. If this process can be put on a commercial basis, it will make available for profitable use millions of tons of sawdust now wasted.

NOTHING TO LOSE.

"So you take an academic interest in Wall street?"
"Yes."
"And what sort of interest is that?"
"Oh, the kind a man takes who has never had any money and never expects to have any."

CHOLERA INFANTA?

Queen of Spain—Moi Gracia! The baby has the stomach ache.
Lord Chamberlain (excitedly)—Woo! Call in the secretary of the interior.—Northwestern Candler.

TELLING TALES.

Guest—What a splendid dinner. I don't often get as good a meal as this.
Tommy—Neither do we.

The Winner.

Perseverance always wins in the long run—usually in a walk.—Youth's Companion.

HAILED AS LAST OF HIS KIND

Work of "Buffalo Bill" as Interpreter of West to East Not Likely to Be Continued.

For years "Buffalo Bill" was the interpreter through whom the East came to understand the region beyond the Mississippi. His fame and his character were a revelation which helped the older portion of the country to understand the problem involved in bringing the West into full membership in the task of working out the nation's destiny.

The work of Cody was a work which neither statesman nor soldier could have done adequately. In a sense, Cody was both statesman and soldier; in every sense he was a highly useful American. The generation that witnessed his exploits can have but small appreciation of the lasting service he performed in helping to weld America into one nation of harmony and understanding.

Cody was the last of his kind. He has no successor. The exploits that made him famous cannot be duplicated; the work he did is a lasting service that cannot be duplicated. Around his memory are gathered some of the best traditions of the nation, and every American with pride of race in his heart mourns at his grave.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PUNISHMENT TO FIT CRIME

Oldtime Citizens of London Seem to Have Been Blessed With a Keen Sense of Humor.

In the city of London records of 1364 it is stated that a certain John Penrose, a taverner, was convicted of "selling unsond and unwholesome wines to the deceit of the common people, to the contempt of the king, to the shameful disgrace of the officers of the city, and to the grievous damage of the community." His sentence was to be imprisoned for a year and a day, to drink a draught of the bad wine, to have the rest poured over his head, and to forswear the calling of a vintner in the city of London for ever.

Our ancestors had a fine sense of making the punishment fit the crime. A man who surreptitiously tapped a London water conduit in 1478 was set on a horse with a vessel like a conduit on his head. Out of the vessel, which was constantly replenished with water, ran a number of small pipes. These played merrily upon the offender as he was led round to the nine conduits of the city, where his crime was publicly proclaimed.—London Tit-Bits.

FAMOUS SCOTCH JOURNAL.

The Edinburgh Scotsman, which was founded in 1817, celebrated its one hundredth anniversary on the 25th of January. A remarkable fact in connection with the Scotsman is that on its business side the paper has been through all its century of activity under the control of two men, the younger of whom was closely associated for 13 years with the elder, and is still in active supervision of its affairs. On the editorial side its direction has been in the hands of only four men. The Scotsman was founded as a weekly and became a daily in 1855. Its motto from the beginning may be said to have been "Liberty and Moderation."

TOO SMART.

Lady—Yes, I advertised for a maid of all work. Are you an early riser?

Applicant—Indeed, I am, ma'am. At me last place I was up and had breakfast ready an' all the beds in the house made before anybody else in the house was up.

OUTCLASSED.

"My father owns a share in a diamond mine."
"Huh! That's nothing. My father owns a whole potato field."

LOCKJAW AHEAD.

Wife—Did you buy something for mother for her birthday?
Hubby—Yes, indeed. I've got a fine lot of sticky taffy.

TIMELY SUGGESTION.

Now that women's hats are to be small this season, what would be the matter with urging that they be sold by the pound?

IN DOUBT.

"Ever eat any terrapin?"
"Well, I've ordered and paid for many. I dunno whether I ever ate any or not."

Dogs and Dogs.

"You can keep a real fine dog in food," says the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, "at an expense of about $10 a month, while a real sorry dog can get out and make a living for himself."

Book Ends.

You could make your own book ends by joining two pieces of metal or wood and then covering it with a cover made of green linen, heavily embroidered in a conventional design.

MARKED CHANGES OF MOODS

Vendome Column, in City of Paris, Has Had Many Vicissitudes Since Its Erection in 1806.

When the Vendome column was erected in 1806, it was surrounded by a statue of more than three meters, representing Napoleon, garbed as a Roman emperor. He held in his left hand a little winged Victory, in bronze, the feet of which rested upon a globe. In 1814 when Caesar became Bonaparte, the statue was taken down, not without trouble, and taken to the foundry where it was recast in the form of Henry VI, destined for the Pont-Neuf. The little Victory appropriated by some workmen, escaped recasting. The statue of the emperor was replaced by a white fleur-de-lis flag, which was taken down in 1830. The following year saw the placing on the monument of another statue of the little corporal. Twenty years later Napoleon III decreed that the Roman emperor should take his place in the sky. Dumont, who was commissioned to this work, executed the statue that we see today. The last little Victory was found and replaced in the imperial hand. In 1871 the Commune pulled down the column. The statue of Dumont was repaired and erected a second time on the reconstructed monument on the 28th of December, 1875. But the little statue of Victory had crumbled into the soil. It will return in a new work by Antonio Mercie that will be called "Gloria Victoribus."—Le Cri de Paris.

SPRINGTIME

The springtime rain is falling
In valley and in dell
Oh, that the cost of living
Could only fall as well.

HUGE SEARCHLIGHT.

At the time of the disastrous fire, which ruined the Edison electrical plant at East Orange, N. J., the salvagers were unable to find the jars containing diamond points used with the disk phonograph. Since this loss of several thousand dollars' worth of points might have been prevented, had the searchers been provided with powerful enough lights, the inventor at once turned his attention toward making such a searchlight. When turned upon the side of a building at night, the result is a glare equal to that seen at noonday. The light will be invaluable in fire-fighting, doing night track-construction work, illuminating mines in emergencies, and in coast life-saving work. The searchlight is somewhat of a heavy weight, and must be hauled on a truck by two men.

WEAR DIAMONDS

"DIAMONDS" are the best investment. When a man who is wearing diamonds approaches another he gets attention because he looks prosperous. This pays. The most cherished treasures a man can give his wife, sweetheart or mother are "diamonds." The Lustrous glitter of these most precious stones, more than anything else, delight the beholder and wearer.

Then diamonds can always be quickly turned back into money.

Our diamonds are flawless; our prices as low as the best can be sold for.

CLEAR RIDGE.

Harvest over—threshers humming.
Clear Ridge was well represented at Shade Gap picnic.

Thomas Gladstone and Abraham Cromwell made a business trip to Chambersburg last Saturday.

Harry Wible and family, of Three Springs, were calling on friends in this vicinity last Sunday.

Earl Fields, employed at Dudley, spent Sunday at his home.

Some of our people attended the ice cream social held in Dr. Davis' office in Hustontown last Saturday evening.

John Carmack and son Ellis spent the time from Wednesday until Sunday with friends in Mercersburg. John is rapidly improving in health.
Mrs. Gladstone Cromwell, of

Hustontown, is spending a couple of weeks in the home of her father-in-law, Thomas Cromwell.

There was quite an exciting auto trip in the direction of Ligonier last Sunday evening when a big car followed by a little "Ford" disappeared and the Ford almost got lost. But fortunately for the occupants, they were seen at their home on Monday morning.

Mrs. John Carmack accompanied by Mrs. Mary Fields made a trip to Hustontown last Friday.

H. N. Henry has been seen on our streets during the past week.

Sounds Deceptive.
