

A Bright Clean Odorless Mellow Light

ATLANTIC Rayolight

YOU know there's a difference in coal. There's a difference in kerosene, too. The one kerosene that always gives a bright, clean, odorless mellow light or a steady, warming heat without smoke, sputter or charring of wicks is called Rayolight Oil. Why? To distinguish it from ordinary kerosenes. It's so highly refined and purified that it gives these perfect results yet costs no more than the other kinds.

Instead of just asking for kerosene, look for the dealer who has this sign on his store: "Atlantic Rayolight Oil for Sale Here." You'll find it a quality store—a good place to do most of your buying.

It's a scientific fact that, of any artificial light, a kerosene lamp is the most restful and pleasing to the eyes.

Hay for Hogs.

With the prices of hogs and corn advanced to about three times as much as we have been accustomed to receive, coupled with the fact that the cost of labor for their production is keeping pace with the advance, many farmers are at a loss to determine how to handle their business. In such instances, the bulletins we so frequently refer to in these columns will suggest new ideas founded on actual tests. One of these suggestions is the keeping of brood sows and stock hogs over winter on some dried legume preferably alfalfa or clover hay. By "tapering off" gradually from all grain to a feed composed almost entirely of clover or alfalfa, brood sows have been carried cheaply through the winter and in the spring they raised as fine litters as the sows that were kept in the usual manner, and very frequently the pigs were larger and stronger than those from sows fed on more grain. Therefore, the farmer who has hogs to keep over winter need have no fear of making a mistake if he feed clover or alfalfa hay with about one-fourth the usual quantity of high priced grain. By making a little inquiry, you will be able to find many Fulton county farmers who have tried the hay method and they can give advice.

Hagerstown Suffers.

Hagerstown is feeling the effects of the cruel war in the great reduction in the number of marriage licenses granted. During the Fair last year 160 licenses to wed were granted, while last week shows a reduction of nearly 50 per cent. from last year's figures.

The open season for bears began last Monday. The season for pheasants, quail, squirrels and woodcock begins next Saturday. Turkeys, deer and rabbits come in later.

Forest Fires.

In the face of the fact that Pennsylvania has just passed through the worst forest fire season since 1908, Chief Forest Fire Warden Wirt reports that the average fire burned over just about half as large an area as in 1915, while the number of thousand-acre fires is twenty-five per cent. under the 1915 record.

The total number of forest fires reported during the 1917 spring fire season is 1,746. The number reported in 1915 was 1,191, and in 1916, 1,013. The average area burned per fire was 157 acres in 1917; in 1916, 306 acres; and in 1915, 152 acres. The fall season for 1917, which is opening favorably, will probably reduce the average for the whole year to less than 140 acres.

The records of the Department of Forestry show that the fire wardens had to contend with unusually difficult weather conditions last spring. Two fires burned in January and seven in February, a very unusual occurrence. During one week in May over a hundred fires were burning every day, the number of fires for this one week being 843, almost half of the total number. The total area burned over was 275,097 acres, the total direct loss was $567,972, and the total cost of extinction was almost $35,000. Indirect losses, such as damage to watersheds and losses to labor, probably amount to several millions of dollars in addition to the direct timber loss.

Of the twelve counties which had over 50 fires each, Schuylkill leads with 108, followed in order by Luzerne with 92, Monroe with 88, Centre with 81 and Dauphin 72. Of the nine counties which had over 10,000 acres each burned over, Dauphin leads with 20,757 acres, followed by Lycoming with 20,093 acres, Elk with 18,389 acres, Luzerne with 17,622 acres, and Centre with 15,949 acres. Of the nine counties which suffered losses of over $20,000 each, Juniata leads with a total damage of $71,714, followed in order by Lycoming with $57,609, Centre with $35,492, Luzerne with $29,458, and Blair with $25,765.

One hundred and eighty of the fires burned less than one acre; 1232 burned less than 100 acres; 1658 burned less than 1,000 acres and only fifty-nine burned over a thousand acres each. The largest single fire burned over 6,200 acres in Juniata county, and caused an estimated loss of $62,570. The second largest fire burned over 5,000 acres in Jefferson township, Dauphin county, but the damage was estimated at only $5,000.

To Get Winter Eggs.

There have been a good many books published and a great many articles written on how to make hens lay in the winter, but it is doubtful if anything has been published that has proved as popular or successful as Poultry Bulletin, No. 219. "Increasing the Winter Yield of Eggs," published by the Department of Agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa.

After going through two editions the Legislature made a special appropriation for a third and revised edition with many added illustrations and much new matter.

This bulletin is ready for this writer's work, is quite a book—can be had free on request by anyone in the State.

"You Just Bet!"

Coal dealers have been betting to boost the coal above the standard of the national fuel district discussion in coal companies the recent purchases of carloads of coal at $4.50 a ton. The disclosure of the method of beating the district government.

According to the official of a manufacturing concern went to a mine and asked for twenty tons of coal for immediate shipment. He was told that it was worth $2 a ton and that he was holding it for a bet. "I'll bet you $2.50 a ton," deliver twenty carloads mill tomorrow," the miner said. "Done," the mine official replied, and the coal was shipped and getting $4.50 a ton.
