

Smoked Glass Why?

Don't Be A Waster.

The King of England knows exactly how many slices of bread are going to be eaten at a meal. There are lots of women in Pennsylvania who say this is impossible and who excuse waste in bread on the ground that they have no way of knowing how much each person at the table will eat.

King George has the loaf brought to the table and he slices off the bread as it is needed. At the end of the meal no slices are left over.

This is not a new custom in England and in many households of both rich and poor it is carried even farther. The end of the loaf is spread thinly and evenly with butter and this buttered slice is then cut off and handed to the diner.

To the end that similar thrift may be introduced in the homes of this State the Food Department of the Pennsylvania Committee of Public Safety puts these questions to every man and woman:

Do you know that you are not wasteful?

How many slices of bread were left over yesterday? What did you do with them?

How much butter did you scrape from the butter dishes?

How much food was left on the plates? What did you do with it?

Do you have the slogan "Clean Plates" in your house?

Do you cook more than is needed?

What about the half cup of milk left over? Did you throw it away or did you use it with soda to make quick breads, corn bread or ginger bread?

Do you save the fat left in the pan after frying?

When your vegetables reach the boiling point do you turn down the gas flame or turn down the damper in the range and save fuel?

Another Year's Work.

The C. L. S. C., class of McConnellsburg begins its third year's reading with the following officers: president, Miss Emma McGovern; vice president, Mrs. C. B. Stevens; secretary and treasurer, Admiral Smith. This is the classical year. The first book taken up, is "Life in Ancient Athens," followed by one dealing with Roman characters and events. The last two books "Worth While" and "How to Live," complete the year's reading.

The class is larger for this year's work and starts with renewed interest because they realize education only stops with life. With knowledge of past lines spread before one, life has a meaning; the present understood, the future faced—rich with the experience on the part of others.

Good Citizenship

A bank account makes a good citizen. That's a broad assertion but it is universally true.

A good citizen is one who is independent, self supporting, and who does things conducive to the best interest of the community. The man who has a bank account is independent, he is able to pay his way and he contributes to the general wealth of his community. His funds are in circulation. He pays taxes and helps to make things go. Likewise a man who has money and property in a community is anxious to see that the community prospers. We pull for the man with a bank account.

Economy in Fashions. War seems to have affected every item of daily life—and dress is not the least conspicuous of these. It is curious how much the latest styles have resulted from the insistent economies of war; it is noticeable in line, in materials, in color, in trimmings. To quote from an article in Good Housekeeping for November: "Although there has been no decided change in the silhouette, the winter can be distinguished by narrower skirts. And woman who makes her clothes, there is nothing satisfying as to find more are simple enough in their easily made, and yet enough to give the appearance coming from the best shops. The long-waisted gathered tunic with band of fur, and the tights, are the new fashions. The top of the one-piece dress is placing, to a great extent, to a great extent, to a great extent."
