A number of our exchanges contain news items of rural mail carriers quitting the U. S. mail service on account of the high cost of living, feed, etc. One reason for their resigning is the fact that men are making from $4.00 to $5.00 day in the factories and mines, with no expense, while carriers receive $3.30 per day and are required to furnish a horse and buggy or an automobile. There are fewer applicants now for jobs in postal service than ever before due to the unusual labor conditions prevailing.
