SEARCHING THE EFFECTS OF GERMAN PRISONERS FOR INFORMATION

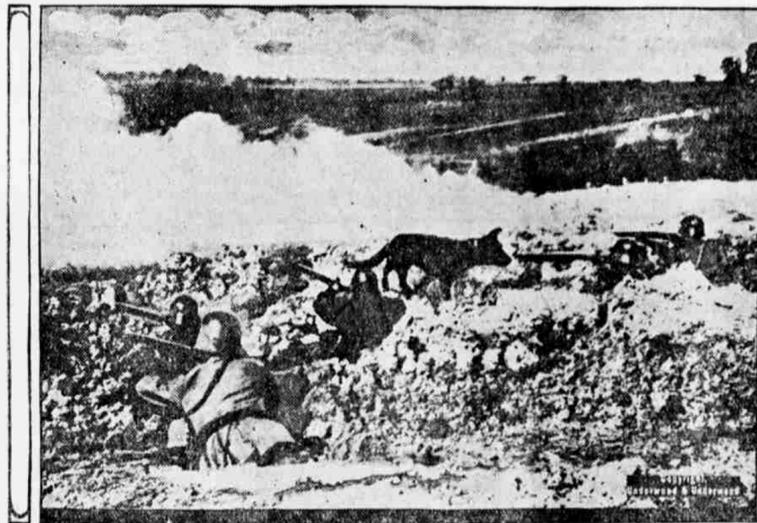

Photograph shows French troopers examining the effects of a bunch of German prisoners for any military information they may contain.

BUILDING ONE OF AMERICA'S IMMENSE VICTORY-BEARERS

One of the immense freighters being built for the United States government to carry supplies abroad to our troops and our allies. This vessel is nearly completed, and there are hundreds of others in the many yards throughout the United States. Many ships are being built, but still more must be had to carry our troops and supplies overseas. Skilled workmen are being formed into a huge industrial army under the department of labor, and each worker will receive a certificate and a button showing him to be a volunteer in this work upon which directly rests the fate of world-wide democracy.

GERMAN PHOTOGRAPH OF BOCHES FIGHTING IN SHELL HOLES

This remarkable photograph taken from a captured German officer, shows German troopers fighting from shell holes before the barrage fire of the allies. A dispatch dog is seen starting back with a message calling for reinforcements, and he seems quite unperturbed by the shell fire which is concentrated on the Boches.

BRITISH TROOPS MOVED ON FRENCH CANAL BARGES

Photographs have arrived in this country showing troops being moved to the front on motorlorries, on light railways and on foot, but perhaps never before has a picture come showing troops being moved to the front on barges via canals, which bring them a short distance from the front. The rest of the journey is made on foot. These barges are loaded with the happy Tommies, and they make reasonably fast progress to the front, though of course not as fast as motorlorries or light railways. The Tommies enjoy this method of travel, as it gives them a good opportunity to view the prettier sections of France.

GENERAL PERSHING MEETS KING ALBERT

General Pershing, commander in chief of the American forces in France, being greeted on his arrival at the Belgian front by King Albert of Belgium. This is the first photograph to arrive in this country showing the meeting. General Pershing paid a visit to the Belgian front and inspected the forces which are holding that part of the line in Flanders.

FOUGHT IN BIG BATTLES

Sergeant Daniel "Bomber" McGinnis, a Boston lad who joined the Canadian overseas forces at the beginning of the war and served with the Second battalion on the western front. He participated in the battles of Messines, Ypres, Armentiers and the Somme. Sergeant McGinnis was wounded in the battle of the Somme, a piece of shell taking off his left leg. He is now employed as an orderly by the new United Service club in New York.

Possibilities of Renaissance.

The Arab is an Asiatic, a Semite, and Arabia is probably his original home. Thence, migration into Babylonia was easy, states a writer, owing to the absence of natural obstacles, such as seas or high mountain ranges. As it was a custom of Arabic historians to begin with the creation, few of them ever reached the era in which they lived and about which they might have written with some accuracy. Largely for that reason no distinct record has come down to us of the highly interesting conquest of northern Africa as far as the Straits of Hercules; it is only after the Arabs effected lodgment in Spain and pushed as far into France as Charles Martel would permit them that anything approaching "history" of them is to be had.

FIERCEST OF FIGHTERS

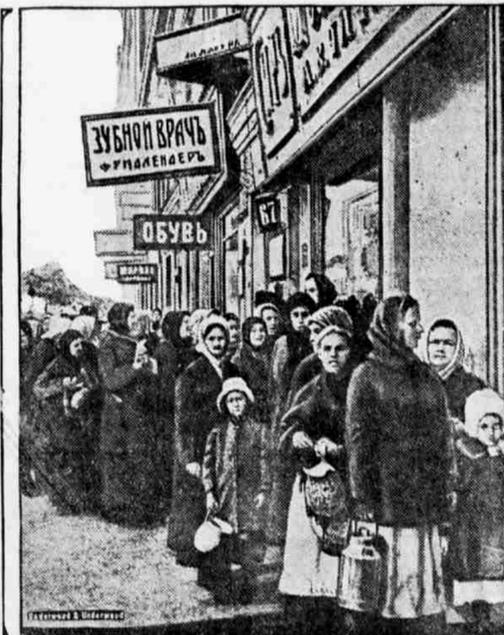

The French colonials are probably the fiercest fighters in the French army. The Germans at any rate fear them more than anything else on earth. It is said that these "colored gemmen" never take a prisoner.

Frost Bitten.

Harold Mueller, a young civil engineer of Richmond, whose work carries him in the country and in association with a good many farmers, tells this story: His mother told him to be on the lookout for any bargains the farmer might offer him. While driving along the road one day in his car he noticed a sign on the fence which read, "Take home all the pumpkins you want—free." Mueller thought to himself, "Here is a farmer after my own heart, who is not a tightwad!" He got three of the largest pumpkins he could find and returned home with his find. He was quite proud of his find, and a few days later inquired of his mother when he could hope for a nice pumpkin pie. His heart sank when he learned the pumpkins had fallen to pieces. The free pumpkins had been frost bitten.—Indianapolis News.

PETROGRAD'S LONG MILK LINES

Long line of women and children waiting to buy milk in Petrograd. Most of them carry pithers, but the supply is so limited that they get very little. This line of people eager to buy necessities can be found at almost all the stores, but the staple foods are very scarce.

CONDENSATIONS

More than 2,000 motorists who failed to stop, look and listen, were killed at grade crossings in 1916, and many more were injured. The number of the killed and injured in these accidents is increasing 25 per cent a year. The houses, streets and roads in Malta are built of nearly white stone, and during the summer months these reflect the sun's rays so strongly that colored glasses are largely worn by both the native population and foreigners. Many sizes and forms of frames and many different colors of glass are used.

A demand for trunks and valises of American make can be created in Paraguay. Those now in general use are of local manufacture and are of an inferior grade. The foreign and domestic commerce bureau will supply a list of importers to firms interested in securing this business.

In a report on business conditions in New Zealand in 1917 Consul General A. A. Winslow states that there is now a fine opening for all kinds of American goods. Agencies should be established with complete stocks available for rush orders and the territory should be covered by competent salesmen.

Resisting the Devil

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D.D.,
Dean of Moody Bible Institute,
Chicago

TEXT—Resist the Devil and he will flee from you.—James 4:7.

There are two spiritual kingdoms in existence, the kingdom of light and the kingdom of darkness, and they are in continued, universal and deadly antagonism. At the head of one is Christ and at the head of the other Satan. The principal field of operations of these opposing kingdoms is the human heart.

Satan cannot be everywhere at once in his own person; but his messengers are legion, which makes it practically true of him that he is ubiquitous, attacking us both by suggestions of evil within and solicitations to evil without. His agents are not only demons, but bad men and women, bad literature, bad amusements, bad habits, bad examples, and when we are resisting these we are resisting him.

(1) The best time to resist him is at the beginning of the temptation, when we are at our strongest and the temptation at its weakest point. For example, have we ever known a drunkard who became one all at once? Did not the deceitful habit creep over his faculties by slow degrees until at last it controlled him? How many latent passions are there in the human breast which never would see the light were it not for the apparently accidental circumstance that first made them known to us? This suggests the carefulness with which we should select the books we read as well as the society in which we mingle.

(2) The temptations of Satan will be felt most powerfully at our weakest point, and each one of us has that point which is a predilection towards some special sin or error.

Gambling is an example of what is meant, since there is in almost every heart a desire to possess riches, and it requires only a slight bend in this current to turn the youthful mind away from honest labor and healthful occupation. Some wise man has said, "The way the tide of man's constitution runs, that way the wind of temptation blows."

(3) The devil often tempts us where we least expect it, and where we think ourselves least liable to fail. Abraham's name is a synonym for faith, and yet he fell through unbelief. Whenever we speak of patience we think of Job, and yet Job "cursed his day." Moses was meek above all the men which were on the earth, and yet his lack of meekness, as exhibited in striking the rock at Kadesh, prevented him from entering the promised land.

(4) The devil can successfully be resisted only in the strength of God. That was the way David coped with Goliath when he said to Saul, "The Lord who delivered me out of the paw of the lion and out of the paw of the bear, he will also deliver me out of the hand of this uncircumcised Philistine." He was not trusting in his physical strength, nor his personal courage, nor his great skill in the use of the sling. All these were brought into active exercise it is true, but yet he had learned to lean upon a power greater than his own and greater than which he opposed.

This gives significance to the latter half of the text, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." We must do the resisting, but our victory over him is brought about by God. In other words, the reason the devil will flee from a man if he resists him is because he has been overcome once for all by the Son of God for all mankind.

O, what hope and encouragement is in those words, "He will flee from you." "Behold I give you power over all the power of the enemy, and nothing shall by any means hurt you," said Jesus to his disciples in Luke 10:19. What a compass there is in this declaration! The tempted Christian is in the wilderness of despair and hears the roaring of the satanic lion. He is traveling on a lonely road and remembers that he has an adversary with murder in his heart. He is in the fires of a fierce conflict and the angel of the bottomless pit is stirring up the flames. "O, thou God of life and light," he cries, "is there no escape? Can I not free myself of this? Shall my spiritual life be threatened every moment with spiritual death?" "No," is the answer of our Almighty God and eternal savior, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you."

Here is a clear command and a precious promise! May he who in his own person overcame our enemy give us diligently to obey the one because we faithfully believe the other.

That Which We Do Not See

That which can be commonly seen and handled and conceived is inferior to the eyes by which it is taken in, and the hands by which it is touched, and faculties by which it is discovered; but that which is infinite is known only to itself. This it is which gives some notion of God, who is yet beyond all our conceptions—our very incapacity of fully grasping him affords us the idea of what he really is. He is presented to our minds in his transcendent greatness, as at once known and unknown. And this is the crowning guilt of men, that they will not recognize one, of whom they cannot possibly be ignorant.—Tertullian.

Toward the Sunset.

"It is not far to the sunset," an old saint used to say cheerily when the day was hard. The most trying day reaches its end at last. It is true of life's day. Whatever trials or hardships come into it it cannot last long; it is only a little time to the sunset.
