Saving Funds and The Thrift Campaign.

The fact that the number of depositors in the saving fund institutions in New York State has increased to the number of 42,900 during the past year is attributed by the State Superintendent of Banking to the various thrift campaigns fostered by the United States Government. The amount of money deposited in these admirable institutions was less than in the preceding year, in spite of the increase in the number of depositors, but this seemingly paradoxical state of affairs is explained by the fact that the people—the people of small and moderate means—have been loaning their money to the government. It is one of the cheering signs of the times, and the best part of it is that the managers of these savings funds have encouraged their depositors to use their money to help win the war. In acting in this patriotic manner they are also building wisely for the future, because they are of the opinion that this war and the various drives for money will be the means of teaching thrift and self-respect.

Banking Superintendent Skinner calls attention to the fact that the New York savings banks purchased for themselves or for their patrons Liberty Bonds to the amount of over $91,100,000. "It should be remembered," he says, "that the patrons of these savings banks are largely working people of small means, unaccustomed to bond-buying investments. They have almost without exception engaged with enthusiasm in the campaign that has been inaugurated for the sale of war savings certificates and thrift stamps. These minute securities offer an exceptional opportunity to the patrons of such institutions to assist in financing the war without withdrawing the small sums which they have laid aside for the time of sickness or death or for the purchase of a home."

This is expert testimony, and there is every reason for hoping that the example which has been set in New York will be duplicated in all the other commonwealths of the Union. The money that is saved to help the government, frequently as the result of sacrifices, will not only be a source of comfort to the men and women of small means, but it will indicate the habit of saving. A thrifty nation is usually a prosperous and contented nation.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Forty-six Men to Each Battle Plane.

After three years of warfare the total number of airplanes able to take the air at any one time on either side of the western front has not been over 2,500. Each plane in the air requires a force of 46 men, two replacement planes on the ground, and one training plane for every pilot who eventually reaches the front, with an extra engine for each plane.

The life of a plane is not more than two months, and the engine must be overhauled after each 75 hours. Now that American battle planes are going overseas, the great problem is to secure the thousands of skilled mechanics, enginemen, motor repair men, wood and metal workers needed to keep the planes in perfect condition. This engineering and mechanical force at the air-dromes, the flying fields, and repair depots, both here and behind the lines in France, is a vital industrial link in the chain to air supremacy.
