HISTORIC FREDERICKSBURG.

little city of Mercersburg, that bear the name of General Mercer. My school room which is about three-quarters of a mile from my dwelling house, is the old drug store of Gen. Mercer, and in the last year or so, there has scarcely been a day when there have not been visitors to look at the old fashioned window sills, windows and doors and the old fireplace about which Mercer and Washington used to sit and discuss political affairs. The building in which Washington went to school still stands, just a short trip across the fields from where I live. President Monroe lived here and went from here to Congress. Chief Justice Marshall and Commodore Maury were both residents of Fredericksburg. We had a manufactory for arms during the Revolution, and we even have an old Inn which dates back before the days of the French and Indian War. Mary, the mother of Washington, is buried here, and her old home still stands as it has stood for 150 years. We have buried here the body of a German prisoner, but that does not mean a prisoner who has died in this war. This prisoner was killed by falling from a scaffold in 1778 while working on a house erected by Fielding Lewis, a brother-in-law of George Washington, and is buried in the back yard.

Our chief claim to fame however is that we were the battle center of the contending armies of the 60's, and more blood was shed in this county, and more lives lost during the Civil War, than any spot of similar size the world around until this present great war struggle. A number of our houses are still battle scarred, and every Sunday morning as I go by the Presbyterian Church I can see two cannon balls sticking in the church wall.

These things don't make a town. The people who live in a town make it for better or for worse; and while Virginia is noted for her hospitality, and Fredericksburg the most hospitable town in the state, I may confess that McConnellsburg is even more hospitable than Fredericksburg. I can never forget, and do not care to forget, the hospitality I received at the hands of your good people and I made debts at old McConnellsburg that I can never repay.

George Reisner, little George whom I used to take on my shoulder and carry to his father's store, is at Camp Lee, some 80 miles from here. His cousin, who lives here in town told me some weeks ago that he expected George to visit him, and promised to bring him down to see me. I have wondered what has become of all the young men who were children when I was last in your town. I have wondered if like George they have placed themselves in the service of the country.

I wish that if you see Jake Reisner you will tell him that my sister Hettie's only child and son is now in France, a member of the Engineer Corps. His father who is a physician, is a Major Doctor in the same regiment. Mrs. Reisner I know will be interested in this piece of information because my sister was named Henrietta after her.

I have been to Pennsylvania a number of times in recent years, but have never had the opportunity nor the time to cross the mountains into your little valley; but if God spares me until my next vacation time I certainly will leave here headed straight for the old town. If you see any of my friends I wish you would remember me kindly to them all. I hope I have not burdened you by sending you this long letter, and that you will not be wearied by reading it. I am

Yours sincerely,
CHARLES H. WISSNER.
P. S. If you ever see Jake Hess who, I believe, is still in your county, give him my regards. I will be glad to welcome you or any of the good people of your town who may come this way.

country contributed all sorts of strange pets to the White House collection.

One of the prime favorites of Quentin was a beautiful little pony which had been given to Archie, his oldest brother, by Secretary of the Interior Bliss. Once, when Archie was ill, Quentin became possessed of the idea that his brother's recovery depended on seeing the pony. Wherefore, he managed to get the little animal into the private elevator in the White House and took him to the bedroom on the upper floor where the sick boy lay.

One of the old family friends told today of the scene in a Washington street car caused by the discovery that young Quentin was present on his way to the White House with a hive full of very active honeybees.

Dressed in Indian garb, with trailing turkey feathers down his back and an Indian headdress, Quentin organized a band of Indians from the small boys of his acquaintance living in the neighborhood of the White House and many were the fierce tribal battles fought under the ancient elms of the White House private grounds. A pet snake was one of the lad's favorite possessions, and it was said that he had more than once created panic in his school by producing this reptile, which he had concealed in his clothing.

Quentin was a public school boy, his father believing that was the true school of democracy. His schoolmates recall one day when the teacher was asking the class to state the occupation of their fathers, and at Quentin's turn he nonchalantly replied: "My father is just it."

It was difficult to keep Quentin out of the war, even when it was confined to the central powers and the entente; when America entered that was no longer possible.

of her brother Edwin at Beach Valley, Pa., where she learned that her father had died on Friday. On Sunday morning, the remains of her father were brought to the home of her brother Edwin, from which place the funeral was held, and she had the opportunity of being present. Her father, Mr. Joseph Schreiner, spent several summers with her at her home at Harrisonville, and he was highly esteemed in this neighborhood. He attended services at both churches at Greenhill regularly while in this neighborhood. The loss of her father is a heavy stroke to Mrs. Deshong, who is much weakened physically by the constant care and nursing of her little daughter during her illness last winter.

Salted the Calf.

The Valley Time-Star published at Newville, Pa., says: "A farmer near our town recently hired a lad to help him do chores. One morning he told him to take some salt and salt a calf out in the pasture. The boy took a quart of salt with him and thoroughly rubbed it all over the calf, working it into the hair. A gang of colts in the pasture scented the salt and got after the calf. They licked all the hair off the calf and nearly took the hide off too."

Hoover's Great Achievement.

In the light of the letter of Mr Hoover to the President no one is going to complain that food prices have increased. It is a marvelous record of achievement which he reports on the part of the Food Administration. We have been sending across not only increasing amounts of food of all kinds to our allies, but more than was requested—although not more than was needed. This was possible only through the lessened consumption in this country.

Statistics are not always entertaining, but here is an instance where everyone is interested since all of us by our more or less compulsory self-denial have aided in the cause.

The food shipped abroad was valued at $1,400,000,000 and this has no reference whatever to the supplies sent our soldiers. The increase in meats and fats was well up to a billion pounds and the total was more than three billion pounds—figures which we cannot grasp.

The Allied nations asked for an increase of 75,000,000 bushels of wheat. We sent 85,000,000 and ten million bushels more to neutral countries. The result is all the more remarkable because our last harvest year was not a notably good one. Wheat was notoriously short and much of the corn failed to mature sufficiently to be used for human food. This year the wheat crop will be fifty per cent greater than last and corn promises well, although it is late.

It is evident that but for our help in this direction all of the Allied nations would have been in sore straits. We must do as much this coming year and as our soldiers require much more food than ordinary persons there, is little likelihood of a surplus. We must face continued high prices and so far as they are necessary there will be no complaining. To win this war we who stay at home will mind no sacrifice. The Nation is to be congratulated in having at the head of one of its most important agencies the man who kept Belgium from starvation and is now doing the same good work for nearly all of civilization.

The person who in these days complains of short rations is disloyal. Most of us have been eating too much anyway and it would be hard to find anyone who has actually suffered from food regulations. Most of us are all the better for them.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Mr. and Mrs. George Layton and daughters Irene and Alice, and son William came over from their home in Whips Cove last Monday morning in their Ford in an hour and a half crossing the mountain at the Lanehart place.

Save Coal

Uncle Sam needs it for war purposes. Every ton you save this summer can be used to heat your home next winter. Save it.

One way is to use an oil cook stove instead of the coal range. That won't be a hardship, but a big advantage. That is if you buy the right oil cook stove.

NEW PERFECTION OIL COOK-STOVES

are now giving satisfactory service in millions of American homes. A New Perfection will give you this same satisfactory service—a really better service (especially in hot weather) than your coal range ever has or ever will. You don't have coal or wood to carry—no dusty ashes to fly all over. And a New Perfection does not make the kitchen almost unbearably hot like a range does. But it will boil and fry and bake things just as you like them. It's always ready at the scratch of a match. You'll be delighted with the splendid results.

Besides, it burns a most economical fuel—kerosene. But the kind of kerosene you use makes a big difference. All kerosenes are not alike in quality. To be sure of always getting best results use Atlantic Rayolight Oil. Buy it at the store that displays this sign "Atlantic Rayolight Oil For Sale Here." It costs no more than ordinary kinds but it's worth more. Go to your nearest dealer now and select your New Perfection Oil Cook Stove.
