By LAURA J. NUNN.

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspape Syndicate.) Early in the great movement for the conservation of food Jessie had broached the subject to her husband. He had acquiesced most heartily. Certainly he would be glad to "do his bit." "All I want is the plainest of food," he said. "And your cooking would make the worst concoctions delicious!" For a while all went well. Delicious dishes based on rice or spaghetti, with nourishing meat sauces, appeared on the table, and occasionally an entire meal of vegetables. And John had enten them, first with noisy approbation of the economic value of the movement, then with a great parade of patriotism, but lastly in a pregnant silence that spoke volumes of martyrdom. Several times he had telephoned that he would not be home for dinner-detained by business.

And then one evening the cat was out of the bag. John had arrived home almost an hour earlier than usual, laden down with packages. Into the kitchen he strode and slammed them noisily down upon the tub-tops. "There!" he said as he untied a string and disclosed a huge steak; "there's a piece of meat. That's steak! Beef! Allow me to introduce you, madam, to a meal. I have had all the makeshifts I want around here and I am off the war stuff for good and all! Why," he continued virtuously, "all I want is simple food. A good piece of meat. some vegetables, some good bread and butter, and a dessert. No frills to that. And I'm going to have them."

Secretly Jessle was just as well pleased. The "makeshifts" had meant much extra work for her, and it must be admitted she did not particularly enjoy made dishes. She, too, liked "good plain food."

So matters jogged along until John produced a pair of tickets for a lecture on "Hooverizing." "It is tonight," he said. "We will have to go-and thank goodness it is with a clear conscience that we can hear him hand it to those people who have not been doing their bit."

"Well, we certainly have!" laughed

An hour later, from their comfortable seats in the hall, they looked at each other in consternation. But the speaker's words still flowed on in earnest appeal, and there was not time for discussion.

"Hundreds of you good people would tell me if I asked you, that you are doing all you can," he said. "You will say that you have cut out everything but necessities. You are using nothing but plain food-and plain food with you means the best roasts of beef, lamb and pork; the finest steaks and chops; the whitest bread you can obtain, and the 'simplest' dessertsusually pies or cake which use up the

"Do you honestly think you are doing your best? This war will be won fortable houses, feel that the war is a remote thing which can never touch you. You give five minutes of pity to the starving children in Belgium or Poland, and then sit down to heaping plates of food and promptly forget all about them. You have a vague sense that everything will be all right. Uncle Sam is behind us, and of course that means that nothing can harm us. Other countries have suffered. But America? Impossible! And so you go on day by day, grumbling a little at the increased cost of liying and continuing to live exactly as you did before the war.

"Many of you think because you have bought a Liberty bond you have 'done your bit.' What right have we to give a 'bit' while our men in the army give their all? So must we. We cannot all go to the front; some of us must stay here to keep things going. But we can and we must do without the things we like; must sacrifice what we most enjoy to help win the cruelest, most horrible war in the history of the world.

"Begin at home-now-to save the foods that our men at the front must have. Cut out the roasts, the steaks, the ples and puddings. What if you don't like war bread? Or macaroni? Or beans three times a week? Do you think the men in the trenches 'like' It-especially now when winter is at hand?

"Looking at it from this point of view the housewives of the country are of even more Importance than its army. For of what use would be an army without food?

"And get away from this idea of doing your 'bit.' Go in all over. A 'bit' is not enough. ALL of the BEST of you is necessary. YOU can win this

In silence John walked home beside his wife. She was doing some deep thinking but wisely refraining from saying anything-yet, Finally it came out. Was it John's usually hearty, loud voice that spoke? "We'll begin tomorrow, Jess," he said huskily. "I guess we have not done much thinking-I've been wishing all along that I could do something. Envied the fellows in uniform and all that, you know. Even if I can't wear the khaki I can do something. How

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION IS AGAINST ALCOHOL.

The following are excerpts from the inaugural address of Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan, president of the American Medical association, at the annual meeting of that body:

"Each member of the medical profession, each county medical society, each state medical society, should take an active part in the propaganda against drink and secure national prohibition not years from now, but now, when it is so badly needed and will accomplish so much good not only for our boys in khaki and in blue but for the nation in arms.

"There can be no doubt of the injurious effects of alcoholic drinks on both the physical and mental well-being of our population. There can be no doubt that the greatest single factor we can control in the interests of the public health of the nation would be the elimination of alcoholic drink,

"I want to plead for the united action of the organized medical profession of this country to secure protection by law against the injury that drink is doing to our people, not as a political measure, but as the mest important health measure that could be secured. In this crisis, when we and our allies are fighting not only for ourselves but also for humanity and civilization, we must organize the entire nation in the most efficient way possible, and this cannot be done without eliminating drink."

The address of Doctor Bevan was so enthusiastically applauded as to leave no doubt of the approval of the three or four thousands of physicians and their friends in the audience.

THINK IT OVER.

The story is told of an Austrian school teacher who, being unable under the laws of the land to give special antialcoholic instruction, injected into his pupils' arithmetic lessons truths relating to the drink evil. One day he gave to them for solution the following problem: "A father spends thirty kreutzer a day for intoxicants. How much does that amount to in so many months, years, etc. In the course of how long a time could he, with his money, make himself independent?" It was eight days, the teacher said, before the answers were handed to him. The effect on the children was so pronounced that they could hardly be restrained from throwing stones into the saloon opposite the schoolhouse. Yet the teacher had not spoken one word against alcohol. After the war is over there will be imperative need for many reconstruction hospitals, homes for disabled soldiers and schools for vocational training of the maimed and crippled. Let patriots ponder carefully how many of these institutions could be maintained or lost by food. Don't forget that for and equipped for the amount-$2,000, one minute. Most of you, in your com- 000,000-estimated to be spent each year for strong drink.

WHAT TWO NOTED WAR LEAD. ERS THINK.

Banish the entire liquor industry from the United States; close every saloon, every brewery; suppress drink ing by severe punishment to the drinker, and if necessary, death to the seller, or maker, or both, as traitors, and the nation will suddenly find itself amazed at its efficiency, and startled at the increase in its labor supply. I shall not go slow on prohibition, for I know what is the greatest foe to my men, greater even than the bullets of the enemy,-General Pershing.

ABRAM'S GENEROUS TREATMENT

LESSON TEXT-Genesis 13:1-11; 14:14-16. GOLDEN TEXT-A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adver-sity.—Proverbs 17:17. DEVOTIONAL READING—Romans 9:

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL FOR TEACHERS—Genesis 12:10-14; 24; 18:16-33; 19:29.

I. Abram and Lot Return From Egypt (vv. 1-4).

Abram went into Egypt because of a famine. No doubt the famine was sent in judgment for the sins of the people, but also for Abram's sake. He needed the graces of his heart developed. He needed to be taught the weakness of his own heart, and the faithfulness of God. The child of God is not promised exemption from trials, but grace sufficient to endure them. Abram failed. In the midst of his trials he went off to Egypt without God's direction, where he got into trouble. To take one's own way always brings him into trouble. His expedient to save his life was unworthy of Abram. He fled, and a lie is never justifiable. It Abram by prevariention deceived the to go "unto the place where his tent had been in the beginning, where the altar was." This showed that he was willing to confess his mistake, and begin life over again. This Egypt experience was a loss spiritually to Abram, though he became rich there. Increase of riches is no sign that a man is in fellowship with God.

II. Abram and Lot Separate (vv. 5-

The goods of both Abram and Lot greatly increased. When they attempted to settle down, trouble arose between their herdsmen. This is the first record of trouble between relatives over financial matters. Riches often interfere with friendship. They kindle jenlousy and strife between men. They engender greed and selfishness in men. Many times members of the same famlly are estranged from each other through strife for wealth. For the chosen of God thus to quarrel is utter folly and criminal, especially when the enemy of the Lord's people looks on. "The Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelt then in the land" (v. 7). It is bad enough for God's children to quarrel, but to do so in the presence of the world which delights therein is greatly to sin. Abram's behavior is a fine example of the art of living together peaceably.' The disgraceful situation was relieved by a generous proposition from Abram. Lot was allowed his holce. Separation is sometimes necessary. Though he owed all to Abram. his selfish heart caused him to grasp for the best. Lot's action shows that his stay in Egypt was ruinous to him. Perhaps he chose the plains of the Jordan because of their resemblance to Egypt. One cannot go into Egypt without being affected by it. This was a fatal choice for Lot. The motive actuating him was worldly advantage. Though he for awhile prospered, it was an expensive undertaking for him. Lot with all his goods was taken away when the confederate kings came against Sodom. He is an example of one saved so as by fire (I Cor. 3:11-15). He set his affections upon earthly things, and the time came when he had to separate from them. The world and its lusts pass away, but he that doeth the will of God abldeth forever (I John 2:15-17). Lot was not wholly corrupt; he was a man who allowed the world to get the better of him Once his money and his family were in Sodom he simply endured the wickedness, longing to escape from it (II Peter 2:6-8).

III. Abram Delivers Lot (Genesis

14:14-16). Though Lot's trouble was the result of his selfish choice, Abram's magnanimity of soul expressed itself, taking up arms to deliver him from the oppressor. This was because Abram was a man of faith. Faith trusts God and fights for the right.

While Lot suffered from his evil choice, Abram was greatly prospered. He grew rich in temporal things, while at the same time he was rich toward God. It were much better to have God and a poor piece of land, than a rich piece of land without God. When Lot was involved in the ruln of his sad choice Abram had the power to deliver him. Abram's whole life shows that those who make obedience to God first get the needed worldly gain (I Kings 3:5-13: Matthew 6:33).

Religion as a Prompter.

Religion, as it beholds the transcendent majesty of God, prompts the soul to a thousand acts of adoration, praise and thanksgiving; it summons the angels and the saints, and the whole world of sentient and even inanimate creatures to sympathy and co-operation in the work of praise; it bids the soul offer all that It has and is to his service and his glory; it congratulates him that he is what he is, and rejoices that any other creatures exist to set forth his praise; it desires that all may be brought to know and love him; it is full of zest for the advancement of his kingdom, and the doing of his will,-Rev. Who Is Jesus Christ?

By REV. W. W. KETCHUM Director of the Evening Classes Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT-Whom say ye that I am?-Mat-thew 16:15.

Christ asked this question of his disciples ages ago, and he is still asktion today.

Christ holds in the hierarchy of beings, believe that Christ is a mere man, and nothing more; but we are not persuaded that they have answered the question correctly. We readily admit the humanity of Christ. It is rarely is much better to die than to lie. ever challenged today. In fact, the tendency of the age is towards the huking, but as soon as the truth was manizing of Christ altogether. But known he was thrust out. Though after we have admitted that Christ is Abram had strayed from the path- a man, there is that about him which way of faith, he had the good sense tells us that we have not fully answered his question.

It was Napoleon Bonaparte who said: "I know men, and I tell you that Jesus Christ is no mere man.' That is just it; we, too, know men, and, because we do, we know that Jesus Christ is no mere man. Everyone agrees that Jesus Christ is the one sinless personality of the race. Twenty centuries of hostile criticism have not found a flaw in his character, It is as stainless and spotless as ever. Of what mere man can you say that? There has never a man lived whose character could stand the white light of criticism as has the character of

And his character is no figment of the fancy. It is not the product of the imagination of a few unlearned fishermen. As Theodore Parker says: "Shall we be told such a man never lived? His whole story is a lie? Supthat Plato and Newton never lived? But who did their works, and thought their thoughts? It takes a Newton to forge a Newton. What man could have fabricated a Jesus? None but a Jesus."

Before, then, we can answer Christ's question aright, we must consider his stainless, spotless character, unequaled by any man in the past and unattained by any man in the present.

ted more than he was obliged to, acknowledged that Christ was "a good and heroic man." That was a great concession for the avowed infidel, and, when weighed carefully, it is seen to be an argument in favor of the unique character of Christ, which lifts him above mere men. For it is obvious to anyone that there can be no discrepancy between a good man and his word. If Christ is all Robert Ingersoll is willing to admit-a good man, then Christ's word must be "a good character and becomes a charlatan. So Christ, then, must be heard. It is absolutely unfair to pass judgment upon him without hearing him. And it will help us, in view of all that is admitted concerning him, if we listen

First, he hears testimony to his own character by publicly challenging anyone to convict him of sin (John 8:46), No one was ever found who accepted the challenge, and Pilate, who examfned him on a spurious complaint of the Jews, said: "I find no fault in By his own testimony, conhim." firmed by the word of Pilate, he stands before us as the one without spot or
