"THE NATION DRY NEXT JULY." With prohibition for the period of the war and thereafter until the termination of demobilization, and prohibition by federal amendment in effect early in 1920 (as seems sure), it may be said that John Barleycorn will be, after July 1st, 1919, forever banished from these United States. So far from wishing him onto other and less favored lands, the temperance hosts are already engaged in a world-wide offensive which will make him an outcast from every corner of the earth-the "man without a country"-no abiding place on sea or land. As for that particular unit of the temperance army, the National W. C. T. U., its occupation will not be gone after it has reached the goal of nationconstitutional prohibition. This point is clearly set forth in an official letter sent by Miss Anna A. Gordon, president, to every state W. C. T. U.

We quote: "Some of our friends not close students of the temperance reform, are short sighted enough to say that with the securing of nation-wide prohibition through ratification of the federal amendment, the work of the W. C. T. U. will be accomplished and our activities should be directed into other channels. On the contrary, we believe we may rightly claim that our greatest constructive work will then begin. Our educational propaganda under the new conditions of nation-wide prohibition will become even more necessary than in the past. All our educational lines of work that concern young people and boys and girls should at once receive our whole-hearted, vigorous attention. The children of today must hold the prohibitory law tomorrow. The appetite for alcoholic liquors and the avarice of the would-be liquor dealer will not become extinct when this nation-wide law becomes operative. Locally we shall continue to be in offensive and defensive struggles with the direst foe of the child and the home; our best efforts will be needed to help establish substitutes for the saloon and to aid in the election of officials committed to the new law and to its strict enforcement. Our program of social service after the prohibition law goes into effect will have new and vital features and we should be alert in our preparedness. With added time and funds at our command, our fascinating and compelling lines of service among foreign-speaking people; on behalf of moral education; child welfare; the welfare of women in industry; the education of women voters; anti-narcotics, anti-vice and many other important departments, can be pushed with new zeal and helpfulness. True to its character as a ploneer the W. C. T. U. will forge ahead CAUSES SERIOUS BACKACHE In the social service activities of the new dry nation and in its mighty national and international program."

How Poor People Can Make Others Rich By REV. HOWARD W. POPE Moody Bible Institute,

Chicago

TEXT-God is able to make all grace abound toward you.-II Cor. 9:8. Doubtless many poor people suffer positive pain when appeals for help are made and they feel compelled to refuse. Most people are fairly generous, and would like to help every good cause that presents itself if they could. Some, however, have so little money above their actual expenses that they have to say-"No" often, or rather they think they must. If, however, their Bible more carefully, they would find that it is quite possible to help any good cause if they so desire. Paul was a poor man, and yet he had learned the secret of making many rich, even in his poverty. So can you learn the same secret if you will. Read over that verse again in II Cor. 9:8, which says, "God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound unto every good work," Such was this grace that out of their deep poverty they raised a contribution so large as to be noted through all the region round about.

When, then, God calls upon us to exercise the grace of liberality, let us not excuse ourselves because we have not the means, but remembering his promise, ask him to supply the means, that we may "abound in this grace also." In some way, we may be sure, he will enable us to respond to every appeal which deeply touches our hearts, for why should he awaken these strong desires unless he has somewhere the means of gratifying them?

There are certain things, however, which even the poorest of us can do to help fill the Lord's treasury; and these require neither time nor money in large quantities, but thoughtful minds and loving hearts.

In the first place, we can make ourselves intelligent. Study the missionary movements of the day, the wants and woes of the heathen world, the Macedonian calls for help. By the time you have become intelligent you will also be enthusiastic, and you now have two rare qualifications for rais-Teach your children the duty of stewardship and the blessedness of systematic giving. Carry it into your Sunday School class and the Christian Endeavor Society. Remember that every child or youth trained in this way will help the Lord's treasury for a lifetime. Do not make yourself obnoxious, but The American soldiers are learning hold it up as a blessed privilege which no one can afford to lose. Secure some good leaflets setting forth the idea of stewardship, and distribute them wisely with prayer that God will add his blessing. And we can pray. Here, after all, is the mightlest weapon in the church's armory-a weapon greatly relied upon in the conversion of souls, but too little esteemed in the taking up of collections. Is it not possible that the church is relying too much upon stirring appeals and fresh information? By all means make the appeals stirring, scatter fresh facts and figures, but do not forget that "power belongeth unto God." Why should we not pray that God will bless those who make a good use of their money, and entrust them with more; that he will influence those who are about making their wills, and persuade them to remember their "elder brother" in their bequests? Christians frequently unite in prayer for the conversion of individuals; why not also select men of means and pray that God will bestow upon them the grace of liberality? Are there not some undeveloped resources in that direction? Years ago the church began to pray that God would open the doors of the heathen world to the gospel. The prayer was answered. Then the cry was, "Lord, send forth laborers into the harvest," and thousands of youths have responded to that prayer. The urgent need of the present hour is money. Could not this want also be met by the power of united prayer? I know of a country lad twenty-three years of age who was working on a

End to "Wailing Place of the Jews." Our capture of the holy city should before long bring to an end a weird spectacle which remained for most visitors their most vivid reminiscence of Jerusalem. New York brewers owning saloon properties are reported by the New York Journal to be preparing to turn them into small tenements. It is said the plan is looked upon by the government and city officials as very practicable and patrictic.
