

PENSION ALL SOLDIERS

The time is fast arriving, if it has not already arrived, when it is the duty of the government to pension every soldier who served in the war. and who survives. The laws as they now stand make it very hard for the most deserving survivors to obtain pensions. The affidavits of officers cannot be readily obtained. even if the officers are alive, and in many cases all the officers who knew circumstances of a wound or injury are dead, or have removed to some remote place. In many cases an injury that was so trifling twenty years ago that a soldier's tent-mate did not know of it, has become a burden that is almost unbearable. and the soldier should have a pension, but unless he can prove that doctors prescribed for him, and that company officers were familiar with the circumstances, the soldier fails to get his pension. Many officers are to-day racking their brains to try and remember some incident in the career of a soldier whose name is almost forgotten, that they may make an affidavit without lying, that will benefit the poor man in his application for relief, If an officer is conscientions, and does not wish to swear to something that he cannot recall to save his life, injustice is liable to be done to a brave soldier. and the soldier is liable to think his old officer is mean, not to try and help him. This condition of things places thousands of officers in very unenviable positions. They want to do the fair thing by old comrades,

GENERAL GRANT'S BOOK

WHAT HE SAYS IN THE PREFACE, WHICH WAS WRITTEN AT MOUNT MCGREGOR.

The first volume of the personal memoirs of General Grant has Leen printed, but it will not be issued to the public until December 1. The preface to the volume was written thing about this country, so far reby General Grant at Mount Mc-Gregor on July 1 of this year. It occupies three pages of the book. It is as follows

" 'Man proposes and God disposes.' There are but few important events in the affairs of men brought about by their own choice.

"Although frequently urged by friends to write my memories, I had determined never to do so, nor to write anything for publication. At the age of nearly sixty-two I received an injury from a fall, which confined me closely to the house while it did not apparently affect my general health. This made study a pleasant pastime. Shortly after the rascality of a business partner developed itself by the an nonncoment of a failure. This was followed soon after by universal depression of all securities, which seemed to threaten the extinction of a good part of the income still retained and for which I am indebted to the kindly act of friends. At this juncture the editor of the Century Mag azine asked me to write a few articles for him ; for at that moment I was living upon borrowed money. The work I found congenial and I determined to continue it. The shipment of cotton amounts to about evant is an important one for me, for good or evil ; I hope for the for-

Dallas is situated in North Texas, 36 hours travel from S: Louis and 48 hours from Chicago. The place has about 30,000 people, and decidedly cosmopolitan. Situated as it is at the junction of the Houston and Texas Central Railroad, and the l'exas Pacific (part of the great Southern Gould system) it, of necessity is an important point in a commercial sense.
