Then let every nook and corner, Permeated be with love ; Perfect trust its fragrance flinging Wheresoe're its inmates rove, And if by a wave of passion Its peace-loving air is stirred, If the mists of sorrow gather Round a hasty act or word ;

Let the oil of sweet forgiveness, And the balm of penitence, Fall like gentle dews of evening, Healing every wounded sense. One law only should the household Feel and willingly obey-Love entwined with sweet forbearan Drift not from its charm away.

Let its influence encircle Like a golden ring of light, Home's pure altar, where'er builded, In the name of honest right. Sweet, sweet home where prayer ascendeth
