SOMEBODY PAYS.

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD.

Some find it convenient to live their ease.

And all obligations to shirk; On every occasion to do as they please And give no attention to work. As idlers and sluggards, as loungers and drones, They follow their indolent ways. By being thus lax, increasing the tax tween the two was begun.

Free lunches, free passes, they have at command, Rich gifts that to others are lost,

And galey they feast on the fat of the land.

And travel regardless of cost, But for all the fine banquets, the we

and the tear Of public or private displays,

Though you may go free, 'tis as sure as can be That somebody pays,

Some boast of the credit they freely obtain. The taxes from which they're exempt, And to cancel the favors received, it is plain

They've made not a single attempt;

remain In debt to the end of their days, And with insolent pride, a "free horse" they ride, For which somebody pays.

Some go through the world with a niggardly heart,

And carry a miserly purse,

While others, with liberal zeal, do their part

And freely their treasures disburse; And for hours of idleness we may enjoy,

For losses and needless delays, For waste and neglect, it is well to reflect

That somebody pays.
