Republican State Ticket
For Supreme Judges
JAMES T. MITCHELL, of Philadelphia.

JAMES T. MITCHELL, of Philadelphia.
For Presidential Electors
LEWIS FURBER, of Lawrence.

Oregon's election last week went Republican by 7,000. The Legislature is almost four-fifths Republican.

The standard oil company is leasing thousands of acres of land in Perry county, with a view of boring for oil, gas or coal supposed to be hidden beneath the earth's surface near there.

Maxwell, who killed his second Preller, in St. Louis, several years ago, will be hanged on July 13th next, the Supreme Court having just fixed that date. Maxwell's execution has been so often interfered with that the public may be excused for doubting that he will ever meet the fate he so richly merits until the fact of his execution is announced.

The Democratic National Convention which convened in St. Louis on Tuesday last made a temporary organization by placing S. M. White of the California delegate in the chair. After completing the organization the Convention nominated Mr. Cleveland for reelection by acclamation, on Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

The vote of the States was called on the ballot for Vice-President, but so strong was the vote raising for Thurman, that a motion to discontinue the ballot and make his nomination unanimous was made, which resolution was carried.

The platform adopted is about the same in tenor as the Platform of 1884, with the understanding that the recommendations of President Cleveland in his recent message on the tariff question is the correct reading of that Platform.

In the June Wide Awake Margaret Sidney gives an amusing story of home boy-life, called 'Eunonia's Boys and How They Kept Home,' which neither mothers nor boys will think far out from the truth, though both may wince. F. Anstey, the author of Vice Versa and The Tinted Venus, has a funny story too, 'Don,' chronicling the heroic treatment of a deceitful greedy little dog by a young lady of fourteen. Edward Everett Hale begins 'The Story of Boston Common' and tells about the witches and the Washing Stone and the old train-band parades and the cow-pastures of this celebrated old park. Another historic field is surveyed, over sea, by Amanda B. Harris, in 'The Wild White Cattle of England'; Landseer's famous painting, 'Wild Cattle of Chillingham,' is reproduced to illustrate the paper, together with a life-picture of the Cadzow herd. E. B. Brooks writes about 'Polo,' and Henry Brooks, the Salem antiquarian, has an illustrated article about 'The Old Tinker-box.' Mrs. Crowninshield, wife of Commodore Crowninshield, U. S. N., begins a good training-ship serial, 'Pinky Smalls: His Story,' full of fun, pathos and adventure, drawn from life. Mrs. Sherwood in 'Double Cross' goes on with the expansion of Phyllis and Wilhelmina in New York City. A good story, 'The Red Cops,' is begun, following the article last month about 'The Pleasures of a Young Nominatist.' There is a capital little paper on 'Two Ways of Using a Birthday Book,' and a good biography of La Fontaine, and Mrs. Leonowens writes about 'Our Asiatic Cousins, the Arabs.' Margaret Eytling, Mrs. Cavazza, M. E. B. Mrs. Margaret Deland and Mary E. Wilkins contribute the poems of the number; everybody should read 'The One in the Middle,' $2.40 cents a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston, Mass.

There is one phase of the labor question that is assuming threatening proportions without attracting the attention its importance really demands. Thousands of immigrants are landing at New York every day, and it is estimated that the present year will witness the arrival of not less than three-quarters of a million of foreigners who will likely become permanent residents in this country. It is to be feared that the causes of large influx of people has very little relation to the best interests of this country, or the welfare of its present population. A large majority of these immigrants come to this country because poverty and want stare them in the face at home and they have a vague sort of hope that their condition will be bettered here. Many of these newcomers will probably make useful citizens, but by far the larger number will go to swell the already over-crowded centers, thus increasing the numerous class of half-fed and discontented-people, and fill up the prisons and almshouses.

The first case of capital punishment in this section of the state occurred in Bellefonte in 1793. Negro Dan Byers, who murdered James Barrows, was convicted and the day of execution set for October 15th, 1892. A company of horses under the command of Capt. James Potter was drawn up near the scaffold. With the first swing the rope broke and Dan fell to the ground unharmed. With that the crowd shouted 'Dan is free!' and made a move to rescue him. While the horse charged on the rescuers and were having an encounter, William Perkin stepped up to Dan and patted him on the shoulder saying, 'Dan, you have always been a good boy, go up now and be hung like a man, which he did.' - Centre Hill Reporter.

The above was no doubt as interesting a bit of information to the readers of the Reporter as it will be to the readers of the Post for in it is demonstrated one of the striking characteristics of our grand-fathers—that of allowing the culprit ninety-nine years in which to prepare for death.
