CHARITY HOSPITAL.

SAD SCENES AMONG AN UNFOR- TUNATE CLASS OF PEOPLE.

Mission Work on Blackwell's Island.
Five Hundred Sufferers Under One Roof—A Dying Girl—Noble Deeds Charity—Outside Work.

The ladies of the mission gathered up their packages and papers and divided in two parties—one to visit the penitentiary and do there the beautiful work which Elizabeth Fry initiated, the other to the Charity hospital, and with the latter I went. A small room is set apart there for the use of the mission. The tables in it were already covered with baskets of fruit, glasses of jelly, bottles of fruit tea, cans of oysters, and various other delicacies. By each basket lay a number of papers and religious tracts. After brief religious services the ladies separated, each taking her own basket and reading matter to the ward she was assigned to.
Here, under this one roof, are five hundred, in every conceivable stage of suffering. The pangs of poverty are increased a hundred fold when disease seizes in its cruel clutches the unhappy victim. Few people are fortunate enough to escape the knowledge of bodily pain.
Most, indeed, can recollect at least a few seasons of physical wretchedness. To my sure, there was a soft bed and loving attention, skilled care and loving attention, doctors who said pleasant things, disguised their doses, delicious trides, colored worm, or what appeared by magic, and a thousand beneficent surprises to create an appetite win a smile. With all that, something like a shudder comes over one at the thought of a repetition of the experience.
To go through a ward in the Charity hospital convinces you that the primer of misery has yet to be mastered by the rest of us. Imagine yourself on a narrow and lumpy bed, the light from a row of big windows beaming in your eyeballs, the feet of the convalescents shuffling and scuffling over the bare floor, the whitewashed walls, devoid of even a wall paper pattern to be deciphered, the callous young doctor to whom you are but a bit of experience, and the food such that if well your stomach and senses would revolt at it.

will have a half mile of covered colonnades.
The only high feature of the building is the chapel tower, and the design, in prinof a series of long, low halls. As I understand, the university is to cover about an acre and a half in extent, that covered by the "founda-

stomach and senses would revolt at it.
As to flowers, books, and other bright colors, they come only in the name of charity.

of the farmers throughout the season of physical wretchedness. To my
tention, doctors who said pleasant things,
thought of a repetition of the experience.
stomach and senses would revolt at it.
