We teachers cerbeen debarred from cutting on the ting on the James Hepburn tract. This is an unfortunate turn of things for our friend Bowen and does not seem equitable, as the writ of estrepment issued by Culp, et. al., clearly had the effect of causing Mr. Bowen to discontinue operations on the Bowersox tract and thereby sustained heavy losses. The decision was The Legislature of Pennsylvania more technical than equitable.

Judge McPherson, at Lebanon, on Tuesday of last week, handed down declares a part, at least, of the Brooks high license law unconstitutional. Jacob Doll, a citizen of Lebanon, not a hotel keeper and not dispensed liquor to his friends in an unusual attendance his own house on several occasions passed again this winter, though if on Sunday, with hospitable intent, and for this he was arrested and which forbids the selling or giving tendency over agents. Nevertheagainst members who had voted for special verdict was taken, and in entering judgement thereon for the defendent the opinion was delivered. The judge says that the sweeping language of the act extends to all persons within the commonwealth, whether or not they may be engaged and makes it a criminal offense for any citizen in his own home to give to a friend, or even a member of his own family, a glass of wine or beer on the first day of the week. On the ground, however, that no notice of such an intention is given in the title of the act, and that to place such a construction upon it would be to Oriental. make the title misleading, the court decided that so much of paragraph 17 as forbids a person who is not a seller of liquor to give intoxicating drink to any other person on the Sabbath is in conflict with the constitution, and is therefore void.
