He Fought at Winchester.
 From the Leesburg (Va.) Mirror.
 In the case of the State vs. John Stuart, indictment for larceny, the prisoner appeared in the court room shuffling along, scarcely able to walk. He wore a soiled check shirt, a very much worn suit and a battered hat.
 Appearing as State witnesses were two well-dressed, sleek-looking men who clearly showed by their looks that they were determined to send the old man to the penitentiary. "Has the prisoner any counsel?" asked Judge Phillips.
 "I have none, your Honor," answered Stuart. "I am a poor man and unable to pay an attorney."
 The Judge saw by the man's looks that his was an unusual case and said: "Well, go on and tell your story."
 "Well, sir, I was in the Confederate army and at the battle of Winchester I was shot through both hips. Since then it has been exceedingly hard for me to support myself. I went to work for this man last year upon his word to board and clothe me and to pay me what my services were worth. During that time he paid me ten cents, with which I bought tobacco. At the end of eight months he refused to pay me any money and refused to give me any clothes, saying that my services were worthless. Then I went into his wardrobe, took a suit of clothes to hide my nakedness and left. He had me indicted for larceny and I have been in jail ever since.
 As the old man finished a hushed murmur of indignation was heard throughout the court room.
 "You say you were shot at Winchester?" asked Judge Phillips, who was himself an officer in the splendid and memorable charge.
 "Yes, sir."
 "Were you in the second charge to the left on the other side of the town?"
 The prisoner's face brightened. "Yes," he said. "I was there, Rhodes Division, and was shot while crossing the ravine just below the hill."
 The Judge was certain then that the old veteran was telling the truth, but to be certain he called the State's witness.
 While this witness was giving in his testimony, which was to the effect that the old man's story was about right, but that he refused to pay him anything because his service were worthless, Stuart leaned over to Solicitor Settle. "Mr. Settle," he said, "your father and I were friends. I lived in Rockingham county and your father persuaded me to enlist in his company. I received my wound while following him. Since then it has been hard for me to keep out of the poor house."
 By this time Judge Phillips, Solicitor Settle and everybody else in the court room were satisfied that the old soldier had been pitilessly persecuted and the face of the on-lookers showed the deepest pity and sympathy for the unfortunate man and the blackest indignation for his heartless employer.
 "Mr. Solicitor," said the Judge, "change your bill of indictment from larceny to trespass. This was willingly done by Mr. Settle."
 "Now," he continued, "judgment is suspended and the prisoner discharged."
 Scarcely had the last word been spoken before every man in the room applauded, and great tears were seen rolling down the cheeks of strong men. As the old man who, half an hour before had been friendless, hobbled out of the court room, hundreds of men drew round him to shake his hand. Our townsman, W. B. Glen, volunteered to secure him a pension. Mr. Hollyfield offered him a position as a miller, and in less than five minutes a purse was made up to buy the old soldier a comfortable suit of clothes.
The Tables Turned.
 One pleasant spring day, a number of years ago, a farmer living in the foothills of the Catskill Mountains, decided that as he had been working very hard for the few weeks preceding the time of our story, preparing his ground for the early crops, he would take a little time for recreation and improve it by a run through the forest with his dog and gun. Accordingly, about 9 o'clock on the day mentioned, he shouldered his gun and ammunition, and, calling his dog, off they started. They had not penetrated the forest very far when the dog started a rabbit.
 "Bang!" spoke the gun and the little creature fell dead. A little farther on the man saw a pretty gray squirrel sitting on the limb of a tree, nibbling at a nut, all unconscious of danger, and he shared the same fate. Thus they proceeded, killing everything in the shape of bird or beast which they encountered until about noon, when, becoming tired and hungry, the man sat down under a large tree with his dog at his feet and the gun lying beside him and produced from his gamebag a lunch, which he proceeded to eat, throwing the bits and bones to the dog. While thus engaged he fell asleep and his mind reversed the order of things and he had a dream which taught him the cruelty of what he had before thought sport. He dreamed that while he and the dog were sleeping under the tree a company of bears stole up and, seeing them there, decided to go hunting themselves. One bear took charge of the dog and held him so that he could not get away; another little bear took his large hat, and sitting down with it between his feet, explored the inside, and the biggest bear of all took the gun and going off a little ways pointed it at the man, who, not stirring, another bear came and lifted him up to a standing position while the big bear was still pointing the gun at him and trying to pull the trigger. He felt himself tremble with fear, his legs refused to support himself and the bears laughed aloud, they were so amused at his plight. All at once the big bear succeeded in pulling the trigger, and the gun went off with a bang, which awoke him from his troubled sleep. He started up in great alarm, but found that everything was just as he left it when he sat down, but great beads of perspiration were rolling down his face, and he could hardly realize that the dream had not been true. After this experience he could take no more pleasure in hunting, for he imagined he knew how the animals, felt when hunted, and he went home to relate his adventure and to say that he had resolved never to take life again for amusement.

MANHOOD
 How Lost, How Restored!
 Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhoea, or Incapacity induced by excess or early indolence. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of error may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure as simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
 This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post-paid, on receipt of four cents or two postage stamps.
 Sample of medicine free.
