BACK TO THE FOLD.

Although this is an off year, politically speaking, every indication is that Pennsylvania will roll up a tremendous Republican majority.

The people have caught on to the fact that Democratic rule is a failure, and that the promises of golden harvests and glorious times are a fake.

They have had a year's trial at the governmental machine, and its management is not to their credit.

If one had given heed to the promises he would have been led to believe that President Cleveland could double the yield of potatoes by special proclamation, bring rain out of cloudless skies, and turn this country into a vale of paradise.

A year's experience has shown us that he cannot do more than any other ordinary man who holds the reins over an ungovernable team.

He might have done better had he not been hampered by the dissensions in his party, which is composed of strange elements, and he soon found that although he had a clear track and a skilled hand he could not drive where he wanted.

His weather bulletin indicated clear weather and sunny skies, and his first proclamation was full of hope and promise.

Soon a cloud loomed up in the Western horizon. It was the Free Trade plank in the Chicago platform. The cloud grew larger and larger and soon obscured the sun.

A terrible storm was impending and soon burst with terrible fury over the land. It put out the fires in the furnaces, shut down the factories and carried desolation into millions of homes.

The President drove for shelter. He saw the Sherman silver shed and started for it, but the team balked, and when almost under its sheltering roof backed him out again.

This is the history of the extraordinary session of Congress, which will end in a compromise if nothing worse, and after the storm is over and the windy harvest garnered, you will find the administration sitting on top of a stubble, like an inchworm, feeling in every direction for another place to land.

The people have done with this foolishness and will all go back to their first love.

Disloyalty to be no Bar.

Mr. Oates of Alabama has offered a bill in Congress repealing that portion of the pension law which requires that an applicant for pension, prove that he was loyal to the Government during the Rebellion. The House Judiciary Committee has reported this bill favorably and we may now expect that it will be railroaded through under Speaker Crisp's recent rulings. This is a thoroughly infamous law. The man who cannot prove his loyalty during the period of the Rebellion should never receive a pension. What is the meaning of this act anyhow? Is it the price the late Southern Brigadiers demanded of the Democracy for furnishing 150 members of Congress, who will always be Democratic? Is it a scheme to put Southerners on the pension rolls? With a Georgian like Hoke Smith in control of pensions, and the repeal of the loyalty test, it may be expected that the pension roll will grow rapidly with the names of soldiers who for a portion of their service wore the gray uniform. Will Northern soldiers, who have shown their indignation when their comrades were dropped from the pension rolls, tolerate a policy that proposes to substitute for them the names of disloyal men?

Hoke Smith points with pride to the fact that he has reduced the pension estimate $5,000,000. The old soldiers who have had their pensions taken and are thrown out upon the charity of a cold world do not enjoy the sight of Hoke looking proud over their misery. When the change in administrations is made, and the Republican party is again in power, the old soldier will again come into his own, not before.

In Memory of Jacob Nerhood.

Whereas, the Supreme Commander, in His all-wise providence has decreed that the late Jacob Nerhood, who was a member of Capt. G. W. Hagan's Co., 24th Regt. of Pa. Co., A., and had seen active service in the 12th Regt. Pa. Vol., as our Post found it a duty to regard in a body the last services and bury our comrade with the honors of war, surrounded by his comrades and the flag for which he so nobly fought, therefore, be it
