THE MIDDLEBURGH POST.

CAU

ELEV

BYDLY

Twe

Wayn

inch tienr.

morn

lost at

were i list of

CHEFT

СЫ

A. S.

EMIL.

Evan

Nin

J. D.

F. M.

W. D

ALUE

WM.

UNKT

mo

Th

Eaw Vale Latet Vine Ky:V rom Loga Dasp Buin Cam Th mit mit

the opposite of the stage of th

۸

TI

Pi

H

the th:

an

conf Kir prii few

Ten W

lar-

T. H. HARTER, EDITOR AND PRO'R.

MIDDLEBURGH, PA., NOV. 2, 1893.

Church pastorates are still sold to the highest bidders in some parts of England. According to the insurance tables expectation of life at ten years of age is greatest in England, 49.2.

It is estimated that the chinch bug, Hessian fly, army worm and cotton worm have cost the United States more than the Civil War.

The New York Press feels it is rather discouraging to be told by Mrs. Emma Ewing, who is an anthority, that while improvements have been made in all other directions, practical cooking stands where it did one hundred years ago.

A Boonville (Mo.) man has established a chinch bug station similar to that of Professor Snow, of Lawrence, Kan. "In another year," predicts the Chicago Herald, "Missouri's name will be put in the bright lexicon of bugleas States."

Professor Virchow, the great German scientist, reaffirms his belief that no trace of "the missing link" between man and the lower animals has been discovered, either in the human skulls which are believed to be most ancient, or in the physical structure of modern Savages.

Aluminum is to be used wherever practicable in the accoutrements, arms and equipments of the German army. By its use the weight carried by iufantry soldiers will be a trifle over fifty-seven pounds, where now it is slightly more than sixty-eight and onehalf pounds.

The people of Mariehead, Mass., have hung up in their town hall National colors, which they have bought for the new war cruiser, which has been named after their famous town. But Marblehead will not end her gift to the warship with this one. Now it is proposed to place in the cruiser something more substantial, perhaps a silver vase ; and it is suggested that a fund be started to be called the "oitizen's gift," to pay for .

The worst feature of a flood is the fact that the river is apt to leave a deposit of sand, varying in thickness from one inch to ten feet, over a large

RETROSPECT.

The roses were not just so sweet, perhaps As we thought they would surely be, And the blossoms were not so pearly whith As of vore, on the orchard tree : But the summer has gone, for all of that,

And with sail reluctant heart We stand at rich autumn's open door And watch its form depart.

The skies were not just so blue, perhaps, As we hoped they would surely be, And the waters were rough that washed our boat.

Instead of the old calm sea : But the summer has gone, for all of that, And the golden-rod is here ; We can see the gleam of its golden sheen In the hand of the aging year,

The rest was not quite so real, perhaps, As we hoped it might prove to be, For instead of Jelsure came work sometimes And the days dragged wearily , But the summer has gone, for all of that,

The holiday time is o'er, And busy hands in the harvest-field Have garnered their golden store,

The summer was not such a dream, perhaps, Of bliss as we thought 'twould be And the beautiful things we plauned to do

Went amiss, for you and me : Yet still it has gone, for all of that,

And we lift our wistful eyes To the land where beyond the winter snows

Another summer lies. -Kathleon R. Wheeler, in Lippincott,

FIRST came here,' said Denis O'Hara, "in one of those fits of enthusiasm at which you all laugh. I had determined to do a great work, and I found everything here I wantedlight, views, climate and models, Our friend

Trenoweth introduced me to the place, gave me inestimable hints, and (no use shaking your head, Jasper; you shall not always hide your light under bushel) in every way made me at home and comfortable. We were much together, for he was, or said he was, interested in my work, and approved of my subject. Sometimes I painted out of doors, favored by the soft, gray light and equable climate for which this place is famous. Sometimes I would work in the studio, and often, taking pity on my loneliness, Trenoweth would drop in here in the evenings, and we would talk-as he alone can make any one talk. Altogether it was very pleasant, and I am not sure that I felt pleased when one evening I neglected work. I could only moon he strolled down here to show me a letter he had received from one of our she let me, which I am bound to say

T haudwriting was hold and she was just the course, Jasper and I, havin ; decided that M. Delaporte was a man, had ex-pected him to rough it like the rest of I kept away for several days, thinking us. I could not let her stay in Trenewlyn itself, but took her up the hill- have gone through that phase of ex-side to a farm house, where I felt cer- perience which she was undergoing. tain they would accommodate her. She was in raptures with the place, and I agreed with her that it was a paradise, as, indeed, it seemed to me on that August night. I remember the moon shining over the bay, the fleet of boats standing out to sea, the lights from the towns and villages scattered along the coast or amid the was charmed ; we all have felt that charm here, and it doesn't lessen with time; we all have acknowledged that also. But I must hurry on. When for Mary, or Magdaleu, or Marietta, just as well as for Maurice or Malcolm her beauty and fascination holding a did on the first evening. I opined rice! that she was a widow, but no hint, however skilful, no trap, however baited, could force her into confito shame, but still she would not let sake. me see the picture, always skilfully turning the easel so that the canvas was hidden whenever Jasper or myself entered the studio. We were never permitted to do so in working hours, but when the daylight faded and the well known little tea table was set out, we often dropped in for a cup of tea and a chat. It was all so pleasant, so homelike. The studio with its draperies and its bowls of flowers, its plants and books and feminine trifles. I wonder how it is that some women seem to lend individuality to their surroundings. The studio has never looked the same since she left."

He paused and laid down the sketch. The usual gayety and brightness of his face was subdued and shadowed. "1-well, it's no good to dwell on it all now," he said abruptly. "Of course I fell madly in love with her. Who could help it? I bet any of you fellows here would have done the same. and dream and follow her about, when sity asking to hire a studio for was not very often. I'm sure I used nonths in order to complete a to bore Trenoweth considerably at that time, though he was patient. And altays: oakn, clear ; the signature at the end of the friendly, gracious, absorved in her simple, concise words only, 'M. Dela- work, and to all appearances unconporte.' We discoursed and speculated scious of what mischief her presence about M. Delaporte. We wondered had wrought. As the third month of Musette Delaporte! Deservedly if he was old or young, agreeable or drew near to its end I grew desperate. the reverse; if he would be a bore, or I thought she avoided ma; she never honored, it hung there on the line, a nuisance-in fact, we talked a great let me into the studio now, and I must and already its praises were sounding, deal about him during the week that | confess I had great curiosity to see the intervened between his letter and his picture. But she laughingly evaded fame arrival. Trenoweth saw to the all my hints, and would only receive arrangements of the studio. It was me at the farmhouse. I believe No. 2 he had agreed to let, and gave | Trenoweth was equally unsuccessful. At last I could stand it no longer. spoke out and told her the whole truth. Of course," and he langhed somewhat bitterly, "it was no use. If she had been my mother or my sister she could not have been more serenely gracions, more pitiful or more surprised. 1-I had made a fool of myself, as we men call it, and all to no purpose. It was maddening, but 1 knew it was hopeless. I had almost known it before my desperate confession. I couldn't bear to see her again. I felt I hated the place, it was so full of memories. So, suddenly without a word to Trenoweth or herself, I packed up my traps and started off on a sketching tour through Cornwall. When I came back the the most beautiful figure woman could studio was closed, and Trenoweth had gone away. The man left in charge, and who made the arrangements for letting them, told me that a new rule had been made by the landlord. They were never to be let to women artists. That is all my part of the story. This -this sketch is only the figure I remember. She was standing once just 'I'm only an artist living in the next like that, looking at the wall of the studio, as if to her it was peopled porte had arrived ; I beg your pardon with life, and form and color. I-I' was fancying myself at the Academy." she said to me, as I asked her at what

"Still she never offered to show it to me, and I would not presume to ask. she was best undisturbed. All artists It is scarcely possible to avoid it, if, indeed, one has any appreciation for or love of art in one's nature.

"At last one day I walked down to the studio. I knocked at the door. There was no answer. I turned the handle and entered. In the full light of the sunset as it streamed through the window, stood the easel, covered no sloping hills. I did not wonder she longer, and, facing me, as I paused on the threshold, was the picture. I stood there too amazed to speak or move. It was magnificent. If I had not known that only a woman's hand had con-Trenoweth heard of the new artist's verted that canvas into a living, sex he was rather put out. I could not breathing history I could not have besee why myself, and I agreed that the lieved it. There was nothing crude, mistake was my own. M might stand or weak or feminine about it. The power and force of genius spoke out like a living voice, and seemed to deor Mortimer. However, when he came mand the homage it so grandly chal-down and saw M. Delaporte here, I lenged. Suddenly I became sware of heard no more about the disadvantages a sound in the stillness -- the low, stiof sex. She was essentially a woman fled sobbing of a woman. I saw her for companionship, cultured, brilliant, then, thrown face downward on the artist to her finger-tips, yet with all couch at the furthest end of the room, her face buried in the cushious, her certain proud reserve between herself whole frame trembling and convulsed and ourselves, marking a line wedared with a passion of grief. 'Oh, Mannot overstep. At the end of a month rice !' she sobbed, and then again only we knew little more about her than we | that name - 'Maurice ! Maurice ! Mau-

"I closed the door softly and went away. There seemed to be something sacred in this grief. I-I could not dence or self-betrayal. We called intrude on it. She was so near to her Mrs. Delaporte. Her name Fame. She held so great a gift, and was Musette, she told me. Her yet she lay weeping her heart out youmother had been a Frenchwoman; of der, like the weakest and most foolish her father she never spoke. She of her sex, for-well, what could I worked very hard, often putting me think, but that it was for some man'a

He paused, his voice seemed a little less steady, a little less cold.

"On the morrow," he said abruptly, 'she was gone, leaving a note of farewell, and-and thanks for me. I felt a momentary disappointment. I should like to have said farewell to her, and it was strange, too, how much I missed her and Denis. The loneliness and quiet of my life grew more than lonely as the days went on, and I at last made up my mind to go to London. Whether by chance or purpose I found myself there on the day the Academy opened. All who are artists know what that day means for them. Iwell. I was artist enough to feel the interest of art triumphs, and the sorrow of its failures. I went where half London was thronging, and mingled with the crowd, artistic, critical and curious, who were gathered in the Academy galleries. I passed into the first room. I noticed how the crowds surged and pushed and thronged around one picture there, and I heard murmurs of praise and wonder from scores of lips as I, too, tried to get sight of what seemed to them so marvelous and attractive. At last a break in the throng favored me. I looked over the heads of some dozen people in front of the picture, and I saw-the picture I had gazed at in such wonder and delight in the studio

Are you a supporter of the present financial system, which congests the currency of the country periodically at the money centres and keeps the masses at the mercy of classes, or do you favor a broad and

Which protects the debtor while it does justice to the creditor.

If you feel this way, you should not be without that great champion of the people's rights,

Published at Atlanta, Ga., and having a circulation of

MORE THAN 156,000

Chiefly among the farmers of America, and going into more homes than any weekly newspaper published on the face of the earth.

IT IS THE BIGGEST AND BEST WEEKLY Newspaper published in America, covering the news of the world, having correspondents in every city in America and the capitals of Europe, and reporting in full the details of the debates in Congress on all questions of public interest. THE + CONSTITUTION Is among the few great newspapers publishing daily editions on the side of the people as against European domination of our money system, and it heartly advocates: Ist. THE FREE COINAGE OF SILVER. Believing that the establishment a single gold standard will wred the prosperity of the great masses of the people, though it may prolit the few was have already grown rich by federal protection and federal subsidy. 2d. TARIFF REFORM. Believing that by throwing our ports open to markets of the world by levying only enough import duties to pay the actual expenses of the government, the people will be better served than by making them pay double prices for protection's sake. 3d. AN INCOME TAX. Believing that those who have much property as bear the burdens of the government in the same protion to those who have little. The Constitution heartily advocates an extent of land that was formerly fertile. In the flood of 1858 a great many farmers in the American bottom in Missouri on going back to their premises after the subsidence of the waters found their property covered with river sand in beds so thick that two or three years elapsed before good crops could be raised.

EXPANSION OF THE CURRENCY

In England the "college by post" system has enrolled about 4000 students and over 200 teachers. In this organization, explains the New York Sun, women of leisure volunteer to teach girls who have not the means or time to attend school. It is all done gratuitously and by mail. Girls wishing instructions in any special branch write to the head of the system and are assigned to some volunteer teacher in that branch. In this country the same work is carried on by the King's Daughters, under Miss Kate Bond.

Truth thinks it "odd that Emin Bey should be so little of a hero in the eyes of the general public. He was a man who stood head and shoulders above many of the men who have won undying renown in Africa, in courage, executive ability and a genius for organization and Government. His physique was by no means robust : he had the stoop of a student, and the traditional spectacled face of a German physician. Yet he was in reality a man of heroic courage and unquestionable force of character. He did not start across the continent of Africa with brass horns, reporters, and hired mercenaries, but recruited his soldiers from the savages themselves. He taught the barbarians to build mills and factories, and held the Arabs at bay, even when so great a soldier as Gordon failed. It seems to me incredible that this marvelous pioneer should have been killed, but the evidence seems overwhelming. He had reason to complain bitterly of his treatment in Africa, and he had not even the solace of fame, which has come to many of the other men who ventured into the wild- of that still undiscovered country. But in the future it is certain that Emin Bey will stand near the head of the list of heroes who have given up their lives to civilize the myages of the Dark Continent."

directions as to trains, etc., and then left me to welcome the newcomer, who was to arrive by the evening train. I had been out all day, and when I came home, tired, cold and hungry, I saw lights in No. 2, and thought to myself, 'My fellow artist has arrived. then.' Thinking it would be only civil to go and give him welcome, I walked up to the door and knocked. A voice called out, 'Come in!' and, turning the handle, I found myself in the presence of -a woman! For a moment I was too surprised to speak. She was mounted on a short stepladder, arranging some velvet draperies, and at my entrance she turned, and, with the rich-hued stuffs forming a background for the pose of bonst of, faced me with as much ease and composure as well, as I lacked. "'Mr. Trenoweth?' she asked inquiringly.

"Her voice was one of those low. rich contraito voices, so rare and so beautiful. "'I'm not Mr. Trenoweth,' I said ; I-I came to see if Mr. Delastudio.

for intruding." " 'Do not apologize, 'she said, frankly. 'This studio is let to me and you she was gazing, 'at the Academy, and are very welcome." "'To you?' I said, somewhat foolishly. 'I thought you were a man.'

"She laughed. 'I have not that of her since." privilege,' she said. 'But I am an artist, and art takes no count of sex. I hope we shall be friends as well as sketch. neighbora."

Who would not in that place and with all were on the bent head and sad. so charming a companion? There and grave face of the man who sat there then I set to work to help her arrange her studio and fix her easel. 'The pic- away, so far that he seemed to have ture seemed very large, to judge from forgotten his promise to finish the the canvas, but she would not let me story which Denis O'Hara had begun. see it then. I forgot fatigue, hunger, everything. I thought I had never met a woman with so perfect a charm of manuer. The ease and grace and dignity of perfect breeding, yet withal a frank and gracious cordiality that was as winning as it was resistless. But, there-what use to say all this! Only when I once begin to talk about forever.

room, and I took her through the lit- would mean. You don't know what I as death, passed in long line'.-Lon-the village to try and find lodgings. Of have staked on it.'

my picture on the line.' I do not know if she ever attained her ambition." he added. "I have never seen or heard

He glanced at Jasper Trenoweth, who silently held out his hand for the

For a moment silence reigned 'I echoed that wish heartily enough. throughout the room. The eyes of them, his thoughts apparently far At last he roused himself. "There is not much more to add," he said slowly. "All that Dennis has said of Musette fighting at Bangkok he ordered out his Delaporte is true, and more than true. She was one of those women who are gantic royal umbrella made a midnight bound to leave their mark on a man's life and memory. After Denis left so his body guard and making an imposabruptly I saw very little of her. She | ing show. As they marched along bareseemed restless, troubled and dis- footed-we read in the letter of a cor-Musetto Delaporte I feel I could go on turbed. Her mind was absorbed in respondent at Bangkok-their footfalls the completion of her picture. That scarce disturbed the quietness of night. "That was a memorable evening, unrest and dissatisfaction which is ever One flaring pine torch cast its light When the studio was arranged to her the penalty of enthusiasm had now upon the figure of the king and added satisfaction, she made me some tea taken the place of previous hopeful- to the solemnity of the scene as its with a little spirit-lamp arrangement ness. 'If it should fail,' she said to light faded into the distance, growing she had, and then we locked up the me. 'Oh, you don't know what that fainter and fainter as the troops, silent and the severest critics as well as the most eager enthusiasts were giving it

"I turned away at last. My steps were, however, arrested on the outskirts of the crowd by sight of a woman whose figure seemed strangely familiar. Her face was veiled and somewhat averted, but I knew well enough that pose of the beautiful head, that coil of gold brown hair, just lifted from the white neck. She-she did not see me as for a moment I lingered there. Then I noticed she was not Leaning on her arm was a alone. man, his face pale and worn, as if by long suffering, his frame bent and crippled. As his eyes caught the picture I saw the sudden light and wonder that leaped into his face. I saw, too, the glory of love and tenderness in hers. I drew nearer; the man was speaking 'How could you do it?' he said ; 'how could you?' 'Oh, Murice, forgive me,' said that low, remembered, voice, 'Dearest; are we not one in heart and soul and name? I only fin4 ished what you had so well begun. You were so ill and helpless, and when you went into the hospital, oh, the days were so long and so empty, I meant to tell you, but when it was finished I had not the courage; so I just sent it, signed, as usual, M. Delaporte. I-I never dared to hope it would be accepted. After all, what did I do? The plan, the thought, the detail all were yours; only my poor weak hand worked when yours was helpless."

"I was so close I heard every word, so close that I saw him bend and kiss with reverence the hand that she had called poor and weak, so close that I heard the low-breathed murmur from his lips, 'God bless and reward you, my noble wife!' . . . .

"And she was married all the time !" said Denis plaintively. "She might have told us!"

Jasper Trenoweth was silent. - The Strand

A Slamese Spectacle.

The King of Siam has a fine idea of the picturesque.. On the night of the chair of state, and shielded by the giinspection of the troops, followed by

Until there is enough of it in circulation to do the legitimate business of country

If you wish to help in shaping the legislation of the government to the ends, GIVE THE CONSTITUTION YOUR ASSISTANCE, lend it a he ing hand in the fight, and remember that by so doing you will help yours help your neighbors, and help your country!

AS A NEWSPAPER: THE WEEKLY CONSTITUTION has equal in America! Its news reports cov the world, and its correspondents and agents are to be found in alm every baliwick in the Southern and Western States.

AS A MAGAZINE : It prints more such matter as is ordinarily found the great magazines of the country than can gotten from even the best of them.

AS AN EDUCATOR: It is a schoolhouse within itself, and a ye reading of THE CONSTITUTION is a lib education to anyone.

AS A FRIEND AND COMPANION: It brings cheer and com is eagerly sought by the children, contains valuable information for mother, and is an encylopædia of instruction for every member the household.

IT'S SPECIAL FEATURES

Are such as are not to be found in any other paper in America.

THE FARM AND FARMERS' DEPARTMENT,

THE WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT,

THE CHILDREN'S DEPARTME

Are all under able direction and are specially attractive to those to whom t departments are addressed.

Its special contributors are writers of such world wide reputation as MARK TV BRET MARTE, FRANK R. STOCKTON, JOEL CHANDLER MARRIS, and hus of others, while it offers weekly service from such writers as BILL ARP. S PLUNKETT, WALLACE P. REED, FRANK L. STANTON, and others, who g literary features a peculiar Southern flavor that commands it to every frailde VIRGINIA to TEXAS, from MISSOURI to CALIFORNIA.

Are You a Subscriber? If not, send on your name of

A SAMPLE COPY

Write for it and send the names and addresses of SIX OF YOUR N BORS to whom you would like to have sample copies of the paper sent free. It costs only ONE DOLLAR a year, and agents are wanted in every Write for agents' terms. Address

THE CONSTITUTION, Atlant

[We call special attention to remarkably Low Clubbing Rates offered elst -Two papers for about the price of one.]