

The Dutchman's Insurance.

A story is told of a German who had taken the precaution to insure the life of his wife for five thousand dollars, and his stable for nine hundred, believing the former might die and the latter be burnt and he could not get along without some compensation for the loss.

"I do not understand this insurance business. I pay you for nine hundred dollars, and when my stable burn down you make me a new one. I don't want a new stable, I want nine hundred dollars."

The agent reasoned with Schmidt, but all to no purpose. When the stable was about finished Schmidt went to consult a lawyer, thinking that he could still get the amount of the policy besides having a new stable.

The lawyer, however informed him that the company had a right to make good the loss by building a new stable, and expressed surprise at finding suit against them.

"But," said Schmidt, "I insure for nine hundred dollar, and did sell put up dem stable for seven hundred and fifty—I do not understand the insurance business."

Finding that he could not compel the payment by law, he became disgusted with the insurance altogether. Calling upon the agent, Schmidt said:—

"Mr. Agent, I want you to stop dem insurance on mine frow. I do more monish in way; I do not understand insurance business."

Agent (surprised)—"By, Mr. Schmidt, you are doing a very foolish thing. You have paid considerable on this policy already, and if your wife should die you will get five thousand dollars."

"Yaw, dat ish vat you tell me now," said Schmidt. "Ven I pay you on my stable you say I get nine hundred dollar if it burns down. So it was burnt, and you not give me mine monish. You say, 'Oh, dat was an old frame stable, and you no pay me my nine hundred dollar. Ven my frow dies, den you say to me, 'Oh she vash an old Dutch woman, she not word any thing; I get you new English wife!' And so I lose mine five thousand dollars. You not fool Schmidt again, I not understand dis insurance business."
