

The Teacher and His Class.

- For the Post.
1. His conduct in public.
 2. His conduct in the school.
 3. His appearance and countenance in the school-room.
 4. Tidiness in the room.
 5. Ventilation of room, (a) light, (b) moisture, (c) sunlight, (d) pleasant room (decorations.)
 6. His language, (1) clear plain English, (2) no incorrect forms, (3) no slang, (4) no vulgarity, (5) no boasts.
 7. His opening the lesson.
 8. His best attention while the lesson is being recited.
 9. His avoiding all incorrect corrections by the pupils.
 10. His explaining all hidden ideas.
 11. His speaking German when needed.
 12. His preparing his lesson.
 13. His deciding all disputes and to right in his decision.
 14. His avoiding the pupil from speaking too much.
 15. His giving as many illustrations as possible, (1) objects of all and every kind.
 16. His leaving the class discuss points, but stop in time.
 17. His using the black board.
 18. His avoiding all acts of indecency on the part of the pupils.
 19. His using different book references.
 20. His having the pupils to rise when speaking.
 21. His having the pupils to keep on the subject then pending.
 22. His having the pupils understand the lesson before dismissing them.
 23. His preventing the other pupils from interrupting him or his class while reciting, (1) disbehavior or anything that will draw the attention of the class.
 24. His helping them how to prepare the next lesson.
 25. His relating stories to them.
 26. His avoiding scolding to much or punishing but mean what he says.
 27. His avoiding threats unless he sees no other way, in the pupils' preparing the lessons.
 28. His having the pupils to answer at irregular times, and in sentences.
 29. His sometimes leaving the length of the next lesson to the majority of the class, but watch carefully himself.
 30. His position while hearing a class recite.
 31. His having the pupils to sit and stand erect.
 32. His having the pupils and their books in tidiness.
 33. His avoiding questions to be answered by "yes" or "no."
 34. His having them to ask as many questions as possible concerning the lesson.
 35. His avoiding any jealousy.
 36. His praising them when deserving of it.
 37. His classes in regular order and at regular times.
 38. His manner of dismissing.
 39. His explaining to them their future results for their present labor as compared with some great men of to-day or past days.
- Now if the teacher fails in any of these suggestions, it is not the wish of the pupil, for his wishes and desires are to be raised from a state of infancy to a high degree of polished civilization, so high that he will be noticed whether seen, heard or read of in foreign countries or this never sun-setting country. But if he succeeds in raising the infinite pupils from the depths of the faithless seas to the highest pinnacle of perpetual snow, he will be honored and rewarded beyond measure, beyond weight and beyond the utterance of any civilized tongue. And if these suggestions are thoroughly carried out his pupils will be seen shining high up above the tree-tops, as a diamond is seen glittering under the rays of the sun, and they will also be plainly understood whether they are speaking in the most costly temple or traveling through the darkest valleys and ravines of the most remote, and depopulated forests of this grand Republic, or in the highest peak of a continent where paganism still prevails.
