The National Capital.

POETIC AND PATRIOTIC DESCRIPTION.—A VIEW FROM THE SOLDIER'S HOME.

The millstones of memory clustering around the National Capitol are rich with historic lore, and refreshing to the tourists from every land and clime.

Stand with me for a moment at the Scott Statue on the heights of the National Soldier's Home, to the north of Washington, as the slanting beams of evening irradiate the scene.

The forest trees of Oak Hill and Arlington cemeteries nod their emerald heads to the beholder, while the winds of nature sing a mournful requiem over the citizens and soldiers who have gone into camp on the upland slopes of Omnipotence.

Oak Hill contains the dust of many illustrious men. Chas. Governor, Secretary of the Treasury and Chief Justice of the United States slept there until removed to Cincinnati. Stanton the Great War Secretary and iron arm of the rebellion rests under a tall granite shaft that is not more firm or compact than the heroic character it memorializes.

Lorenzo Dow, the great apostle of temperance and revival religion is covered with a sandstone slab, grown over with lichens and creeping grapes. Howard Payne, author of Home Sweet Home, has a monument and marble bust to glorify his dust in death, while in life he was a poor forlorn wanderer, often without home, food or shelter: another Diogenes:

When I am dead, let no vain pomp display A surface sorrow o'er my pulseless clay, But all the dear old friends I loved in life May shed a tear, console my child and wife.

James G. Blaine, that erstwhile filled the eye of a nation, sleeps beneath the giant oaks of this cemetery, by the side of his son and daughter, with grave unmarked and memory fading into the twilight of oblivion.

Many great and good soldiers sleep their last sleep on Arlington Heights, that we see in the glimmering distance. The dashing Sheridan: gullant Crook, the Indian fighter; General Meigs, the faithful Quartermaster; General Hunt, Chief of artillery; Belknap, Secretary of War; Hazen, Sturgis, Baxter, Crane, Ayers, and the illustrious Admiral Porter, with a gallant crew of his naval subordinates, rest under the shade of those towering trees.

Lengthen your view from the Soldier's Home, and we behold fifteen miles away the hill-tops of Mount Vernon looming up in fading horizon, and nearer the walls of Fort Washington shining in the distance; the spires and smoke of Alexandria rising over the ancient town where Jackson shot Colonel Elsworth in the hotel, and where Brown sent a bullet through the heart of the rash Virginian, who defied a whole Government and flung his rebel flag to that May morning breeze.

Let the eye linger along the banks of the pellucid Potomac, and you see a long dark line spanning its flashing waters, and perhaps, a rapid railroad train rumbling over the crumbling timbers of the historic Long Bridge. Could this bridge talk what a story it could tell of the hopes and fears of those beaten

Union soldiers who crossed its staggering piers in July, 1861, while the echo of cannon from Bull Run rang in their ears.

Look at the swelling dome of the white Capitol; the great monumental marble pile, erected to the memory of the Father of his Country, and lifting its head 555 feet into the azure sky; and the State, War and Navy Department buildings, are among the chief landmarks that meet the vision. Then behold the great green squares, parks, circles, angles, and the long shaded, avenues sweeping away to the horizon, and the traveler has some idea of the possibilities of Washington a thousand years hence, when the bright flag of the Great Republic shall light up the pathway of mankind and guarantee universal suffrage and home rule to the whole world.

A thousand years my own Columbia, A thousand years rule the right; A thousand years of law and order, A thousand years of mind and might!

It is our hope that this day shall be a direct ray in deed and in truth, beget the number of directors, and from the freedom manifested by each one present in discussing the needs of our schools and the timely topics of the day relating to the supervisions of the same.

In conjunction with others, the following subjects will be presented viz: "How should visiting by Directors be conducted?" Dr. P. Herman, Kratzerville, Pa. "Teachers and Our Public Schools," G. C. Gutelius, Middleburgh, Pa.

MUSIC. Excell's School Songs Nos. 1 and 2 combined will be used entirely during the day sessions of the Institute. The Middleburgh Orchestra will furnish music for the evening entertainments.

An earnest appeal is made to the general public to attend any or all of the sessions of the Institute. A special effort has been made to secure the best possible talent, both in the instructors and evening entertainments and lectures.

We are certain by giving you your presence, especially at the lectures you will feel satisfied that you had a treat of intellectual fun mingled with solid information. Dr. Philips is one of the leading educators in the country. Pleasing in address, eloquent in speech and full of convincing facts, he strikes the popular chord in every sentence he utters in the delivery of that gem of a lecture

"Through the Bright Continent." Prof. George E. Little has become so famous in this country as an artist that any extended account from us is useless. Suffice it to say, he is the man to please the boys and girls. Let them come and enjoy an evening of rare yet healthy fun.

Dr. Levin I. Handy is an independent thinker. He has the grace and skill and wit and eloquence needed to delight an audience. His eloquence comes not from careful declamation; it comes from a mind and heart on fire with the theme. His lecture, "The Road to Victory," is a masterpiece and is delivered by a witty, skillful natural born orator.

Dr. Byron W. King is the prince of entertainers. He is a scholar, author, actor, teacher and incomparable orator combined—a glorious combination meeting in an accomplished and lovable gentleman. A few months ago he carried by storms of applause a select audience in Selingsgrove.

Corporal Thomas Kay known to his auditors as the "Irrepressible Tom" is full of originality and inventive genius. Possessing a sweet voice and being richly endowed with the powers of mimicry he is enabled to perform all the functions of a royal entertainer and will most assuredly drive away the cares and blues of those who come in his presence.

In conclusion let us show our teachers that we intend by our presence at the Institute to rejoice with them in their season of pleasure and lend our aid to theirs in making the joy the more complete and raise the statue of our Institute to a still higher altitude of success. Come one, come all. Let everybody come.

Faithfully Yours, F. C. BOWENSON, County Supt.
