CORNELL DEFEATED.

The English Oarsmen Win the Henley Race

Cornell's attempt to capture the Grand Challenge cup at Henley has ended in another flasco. The American crew led their competitors grandly in the second heat of the race until three-quarters of the distance had been passed. Then an accident disab-led one of their men aud they were thrown out of the competition. The struggle is finished so far as Cornell is concerned and finished without a genuine test with a single one of the English crews.

The story of the melancholy affair is a very brief one. The Americans took the lead over Trinity at the very start and maintained it with every indication of winning until the mile post was nearly reached. The Cam-bridge men were then gaining slightly, but Corneil's lead was more than half a length. side which completely disabled him. His companions tried to help him and made three attempts to row on without his aid, but that was impossible. The injured man did not faint, as at first reported, but was unable to row a single stroke, and it was of course im-possible to finish the race.

The "yellow peril" is what is now troubling excitable folk in Europe, says the New York Post. The phrase covers the fear of a tremendous conflict impending with the yellow races of the Orient. It is to come, first of all, in the form of a crushing industrial competition. China and Japan are not extending their commercial treatics for nothing. They are planning to do the most gigantic dumping of cheap goods upon helpless Europe that the world ever saw. With their cheap and inexhaustible labor supply, with their patience, their artistic endowment, their quickness to adopt and appropriate all mechanic arts, who can stand against them? Perhaps the afflicted Europeans will try to repel the cheap goods by force of arms, but that will only bring on an unequal combat with the swarming millions who are even now aching for a chance to overrun Europe. These horrible imagining will do to furnish forth an evening's gossip or evoke editorial wisdom, but they are about as reasonable as it would be to suppose that the megalosaurus would be too much for man if he took to threshing around the earth again. Brains are better than numbers to fight brute force and barbarians with, and the impending ravaging of Europe by the hordes of the East is even less likely to come off now than any time these two thousand years, during which it has been steadily predicted but never realized.

The reason for the boat sinking so quickly was the fact that she had a great amount of ballast, which could not be shifted, and that being new they had not as yet put in any air cans to buoy her.

But it will be built on a foundation deeper and broader than 'free silver' or 'bimetalism,' for these terms express nothing that reaches the core of the troubles which confront us. Its motto will be something like this: Let the people rule. Its platform could properly be short, plain and unpressive to the needs of the time and could be constructed on six pillars: First Get the people at work; pay they do. Second—Away with landlordism. Third—Down with the money power. Fourth —Oat with the transportation monopoly. Fifth-Up with the people. Sixth-Live the republic.
