When he visits Chetek he is dressed in blue drilling overalls reaching only to his knees; his yest is one of his own make, as well as the moceasins which he wears. He has the face and figure a goatee, silvery white, grows straight out from a well rounded and character-Istic chin. Whenever he pays Chetek a visit the children all treat him with much respect. The younger generation look upon him as a supernatural being. When speaking of the loss of the Lady Elgin his eyes fill with tears and his voice falls to a low monotone, His description of the shricks of the drowning and frenzied seamen and helpless officers brings tears to the eyes of the listener.

He was saved by the aid of a lifepreserver, and after floating for hours he was picked up by a searching party, void of all clothing and about dead. THEY LOVE ANIMALS,

The Japanese Have a Tender Regard for the Brute Creation.

The love of animals seems to be implanted in the henrys of the Japanese, and is an exceedingly amiable trait of their character. There is a wonderful smypathy existing between them and the lower animals, which a stranger cannot full to notice and admire. Consideration for the lower order of beings is probably the result of the kinds | 0500,88-100 a ly tenets of Buddha, who Instilled the lesson of divine humanity into his followers; but it may be that the benevolence of the Japanese owes its origin to fear as well as love, since they are believers in transmigration and Buddha says: "Thy future birth will be unhappy if thou doest cruel things."

The education of the Japanese child is derived in most cases from his mother, who teaches him morality and tenderness while yet an Infant. To this beautiful feminine influence may be traced the love of the little ones for flowers, birds and beauts. They are fond of playing with toads, snalls and butterfiles, but handle them so gently that they escape unharmed; even the tiniest toddler will go out of his way to avoid crushing the meanest worm that "rawls. Their parents and nurses tell them all sorts of qualit tales about animals, and the folk love of the country teems with stories of birds and beasts and fishes. The little ones grow up with many pretty conceits about birds and insects; among others they have a rhythmical charm which they believe will infullibly make the great

He had a class supper, with the result that he had a most violent illness, and could not hold court for two or three days. When able to sit on the bench, the first case tried was an affray in which one man used a pistol and the other knocked him down with a clain (in the shell). Manly, appearing for the State, introduced witness to prove that one clam, so used. was a deadly weapon, "Stop there court will hear evidence whether or not court knows without further evidence

2,000 MINERSOUT.

They Ask For a Partial Restoration of Former Wages.

Advices are that 2,000 miners employed in the mines of Bell, Lewis and Yates at Dubols, Pa., are on a strike. The trouble dates back to the hard times of 1891, when the men asked for a reduction of 30 cents per ton in order that by so doing they might be kept at work. When business began to revive the men asked for the old scale of wages and when a new scale is to go into effect.

On Monday a mass meeting was held, Resolutions were adopted requesting the adoption of a new scale of wages by the company. For pick mined coal 31 cents per ton is asked to October 1, and from thence on 40 cents is asked, the scale for machine mined coal to remain unchanged until October 1.

The mines affected by the strike are the Reynoldsville, London and Dubois and two other mines not operated so extensively.

As yet the mining company has made no offer of settlement.
