and generally played out, when I commenced to use Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, writes S. I. Young, of Hiram, Ohio. "For years I have suffered with inflammation and constant pain in the bladder and kidneys, and have gradually grown worse and expected at any time that passing urines by nature's effort would cease. Besides I have had rheumatism in every muscle and joint, and acute pain in the back, but I must say I have never felt as well as I do now. I have improved daily since in being the use of

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY

About a week ago I gave a man afflicted with bladder trouble, some Favorite Remedy, and to day he said: "That is a great medicine; I am better already," and he drove eight miles to get a bottle of it.

AN AWFUL OBJECT LESSON.

But It Failed to Have Exactly the Effect Desired.

The stereopticon has become an important factor in political campaign work. Pictorial arguments appeal to an audience with a force and effectiveness which can be secured in no other way. But wise discretion must be exercised in making illustrations which are easily understood and capable of only one interpretation.

A prohibition campaign orator the other night undertook to show by stereopticon views the terrible effects of whisky upon the human system. He threw upon the screen a large disk filled with wriggling monsters and remarked: "Here you see a magnified drop of water—ordinary drinking water. You will observe that it is teeming with life. I shall now add a little alcohol to the drop of water, and you will observe how it affects animal life even in the lowest forms of existence. This will aid us to understand its effects upon the higher animals and man himself."

Whereupon the alcohol was introduced into the experiment, and the squirming animalcules ceased to wriggle and tumbled to the bottom of the disk, dead. Before the orator could make any application of his illustration an old man standing on the curb inquired:

"Say, mister, was that a drop of water—just such water as we drink every day?"

"Yes, sir," replied the orator.

"Chuck full of snakes and things?"

"As you saw a moment ago; yes."

"And whisky knocked 'em all out stiff and cold?"

"Precisely. Alcohol is terribly destructive to animal life."

"Well," remarked the old man, with an emphatic snap, "I never have used the stuff, but if that's the way it works I'm never going to drink any more water without adding a little whisky to it first to make it fit to drink."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Just Keeping Game.

Stories of noted gamblers were in order, when the following was told of the late Charley Perkins: Charley was playing seven up with a friend who knew him very well, and Charley was not playing the squarest game in the world. His friend remonstrated with him something as follows:

"Look here, Charley, you know you can beat me playing this game 'shoes to plates,' and I don't mind your winning my money on the square, but you can win it fast enough without cheating."

"I couldn't cheat you. I don't know how. I wouldn't if I could, and I couldn't if I would."

Spades were trumps, and Perkins was the dealer, when his friend, reaching across the table suddenly, grabbed his right hand and, turning it over, exposed the ace and deuce of spades, which he was holding out in his capacious palm.

"There! What do you call that if you're not cheating, Charley?"

"Did you think I was trying to cheat you?"

"It looks like you were, doesn't it?"

"Well, now I begin to believe that you don't know much about this game. I thought you knew seven up pretty well, but now you don't seem to know enough to pound sand."

"Well, I know when I see a man holding out, any way."

"I wasn't holding out, you darned fool. I was keeping game. Don't you see? You're two, and I'm one."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Not Alone.

"I never saw any one more skillful at driving a horse single handed than Willy Nilly," said the auburn haired girl.

"Single handed and alone," said the brown eyed girl, who has a mild mania for stock phrases.

"Of course not, idiot. Why should he want to drive single handed when he was alone?"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Wares Mixed Up.

"Great sensation in that big department store."

"What was it?"

"An elephant fell out of the zoo department through seven skylights and rained the ice in the basement skating rink department."—Chicago Record.

The Feminine View.

Nell—Did you enjoy the performance last night?

Belle—No, it was stupid. Nearly every woman in the house took her hat off, and there was nothing to look at but the play.—Philadelphia Record.

The Newest Variety of Grass Widower.

Pryman—Did I understand you to say that Dumley was a widower?

Wyman—A grass widower. His wife's got a bicycle.—Richmond Dispatch.

A Cord of Music.

"Tommy, do you know what a string instrument is?"

"Yessum. A hand organ with a monkey tied to it."—Roxbury Gazette.

Help Wanted.

Inebriated Yachtsman (in the bathtub)—Wh—hic! Lend a hand, 'body, an—hic—help me bale her out. She's—hic—sinking!—New York Evening Journal.

One View of Heaven.

"I don't like er man," said Uncle Eben, "dat seems ter git his chief religious comfort by regarbin' heaven er place dat 'is enemies is gwinter wainter git inter an can't."—Washington Star.

She Did.

Caller (looking at pictures)—Does your mamma paint?

Little Son—Yes, but she's finished that an is puttin on the powder now. She'll be down in a minute.—Tit-Bita.

He States What He Knows.

Sunday School Teacher—Can you tell me the story of the prodigal son?

Street Arab (recently gathered in)—He wuz de bloke what blew in all his dust an den went home an laid down on de old man.—Boston Courier.

His Suit.

"Oh, why do they all spurn my suit?" he murmured sadly.

Then he tried another pawnshop.—Up to Date.

Couldn't Believe It.

"I think your daughter intends to elope."

The old man looked at the neighbor who was always interfering in matters that did not concern him and shook his head.

"I can hardly believe it," he said.

"I have every reason to believe"

"But that won't do," interrupted the old man. "You forget that this is a serious matter that ought not to be allowed to rest upon hearsay evidence. When one man comes to another and tells him that his daughter is about to forsake the parental roof under cover of the night, he should be absolutely sure of what he says. Have you incontrovertible evidence that what you say is true?"

"Well, no, I can't say that I have," replied the officious neighbor, beginning to feel that perhaps he had gone too far.

"Just as I feared," returned the old man. "This is the third time I've had my hopes needlessly raised by reports of this sort, and it is growing monotonous."—Chicago Post.

No Lack of Raw Material.

"Fawther," said Dickey, seizing the guinea he firmly by the bill and holding her head down on the block, "what's the reason I've always got to do this when you cut off a guinea's head?"

"Because a fowl of this kind always humps her neck up so it's hard to get at it with the hatchet."

"But suppose you made a mislick and chopped off a lot of my fingers?"

Mr. McCorkle, father of 14 children, mostly boys, looked fixedly at his youngest.

"In that case, Dickey," he said, "I should simply call another boy and try it again."—Chicago Tribune.

Making a Payment.

Penniman—Do I owe you anything, sir?

Stocks—Yes, sir. You owe me $10 and an apology for not having paid it before.

Penniman—Ah, well, in these times a man has to be cautious in making payments, so I'll just pay you the apology and let the rest stand.—Boston Courier.

Current Affairs.

"Does your wife take any interest in current politics?" asked the earnest woman.

"Naw," replied Mr. Sordfarm, "she don't. But if it's currant jell er currant pie, why, I allow she could tell you more things about 'em 'n ever you drem of."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

What Impressed Her.

"He says that he loves me more than his life and that he can't live without me."

"Oh, all young men say that."

"But they don't say it to me."—Truth.

A Phrase Pictorially Presented.

THE ROMANCE OF CHOLLY.

One Day It Came to a Strange, Sad Ending.

Cholly Addeplate had been in love with Chiara Pironetti, the music hall queen, for two weeks. He had sent her flowers, diamonds, lover's notes and the rest, and at last came the happy hour when she received him in her luxurious Harlem flat.

As he beheld her in her pink evening dress she looked even more girlish and lovely than on the stage, and before a half hour had passed Cholly was pouring out his love with an eloquence that surprised even himself.

"I weally—ah—love you—by Jove, I do!" he cried. "I've got lots of cash, and my family's all right. The gov'ner's a banker, you know, and my mother was a Hoffenstein, and"

"What!" exclaimed Chiara, trembling with excitement. "A Hoffenstein! Her Christian name? Tell me. Quick! Quick!"

"Her name was Caroline," replied Cholly, greatly surprised.

"Caroline Hoffenstein!" shrieked Chiara, now as pale as death. "Caroline Hoffenstein your mother! Let me look at you."

She scanned the young man's features for a full minute without saying a word. Then, with a cry of supreme joy, she threw her arms around his neck and drew him to her breast.

"My dear, dear Charles," she said. "I cannot be mistaken. You have her eyes, her hair, her nose. From the way you spoke of her I know, alas, she has gone from this world, but I have you, Charlie, anyhow, haven't I, dear?"

"Seems so," said the bewildered Cholly, "but"

"Oh, you do not understand, of course," interrupted Chiara. "I was so overjoyed at discovering who you are that I took you to my heart before explaining that Caroline Hoffenstein was my daughter, the child that was taken away from me when I was divorced from your grandfather. I never heard her name again till you mentioned it tonight. I missed her dreadfully for years, but now you will make up for her loss, won't you, dear boy? You will love your grandmother just a little? Say you will, dear."

But Cholly had swooned away.—New York Evening Journal.

Consumption

Out-door life and Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites have cured thousands of cases of consumption in the early stages. They cure old, advanced cases too; but not so many, nor so promptly. When a case is so far advanced that a cure cannot be made, even then SCOTT'S EMULSION checks the rapidity of the disease, relieves the pains in the chest, reduces the night sweats, and makes the cough easier. In these cases it comforts and prolongs life. Don't experiment with cures that destroy the digestion. Pin your faith to the one remedy which has been THE STANDARD FOR OVER 20 YEARS.

Book about it free for the asking. For sale by all druggists at 50c. and $1.00.
