THE SENATORIAL CONTEST OPEN
Communication from the Philadelphia Branch of the National League of Business Men to the Ex-Postmaster General and the Letter's Reply.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—The Philadelphia branch of the National League of Business Men held another important meeting yesterday, which undoubtedly will lead to developments that will have great influence in the political affairs of the state in the near future. During the campaign which ended in such a pronounced victory for the cause of sound money organizations of business men all over the country gave assistance that undoubtedly had much to do with the sweeping character of the victory. Of these organizations none was more prominent or more vigorous than the McKinley and Hobart business men's national campaign committee of Philadelphia.

One of the great lessons of the campaign was the utility of the business man in political affairs, and the necessity of his continued interest as a balance of power to guard the interests of government, and to insist upon economical and equitable legislation in the interest of all concerned. This led to the formation last week of the National League of Business Men, and when this was done the McKinley and Hobart campaign committee formed itself into a permanent organization, and was enrolled as the Philadelphia branch of the national organization. Yesterday's meeting was the second in its history, which is now so brief, but which shows every indication of being long and eventful.

This membership is thoroughly representative of the business interests of this city. Since that first meeting so well have the objects of the organization been realized that the membership has increased rapidly, for there seems to be a well developed idea that the influence exerted during the presidential campaign will continue to be felt during the coming administration of Major McKinley. In other words, the old political lines have been broken to a large extent, because Republicans and Democrats stood shoulder to shoulder in the fight for honest money, in the interest of a sound business policy for the nation, and while no one can accurately estimate the influence this National League of Business Men will exert, the fact that it has the sanction of the president-elect and of his advisors is a strong indication that it will have great power.

The most important business of the first meeting, aside from the organization, was the presentation of the name of John Wannamaker as that of a representative business man who would reflect credit on the state as a member of the United States senate. This was followed by more decisive action at the meeting held yesterday. By a unanimous vote it was decided to request Mr. Wannamaker to become a candidate. For some time past there have been newspaper references to Mr. Wannamaker's candidacy, but they have not had any official basis. It was probably the knowledge of this that led to the action taken. The business men showed themselves to be very much in earnest in the matter, and were pointed in their insistence, as the following correspondence, which of itself tells the story of the meeting, will show:

"PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 16, 1893.
"Hon. John Wannamaker, Philadelphia, Pa.
"DEAR SIR—At a meeting of the executive committee of the Philadelphia branch of the National League of Business Men, held this day, it was, upon motion, decided to inform you of the unanimous adoption of the following resolutions:
"Whereas, The vast business and manufacturing interests of the state of Pennsylvania should be represented in the United States senate by a man of high character, experience and knowledge of public affairs; and,
"Whereas, The city of Philadelphia, the citadel of Republicanism, is, by common consent, entitled to the next United States senatorship; therefore, be it
"Resolved, That we present, as a candidate eminently fitted to fill the exalted position of United States senator, the Hon. John Wannamaker, of Philadelphia, ex-postmaster general of the United States.
"Resolved, That we use all honorable means to promote his election, and request the business men of Pennsylvania to unite with us in this effort, and have our best interests placed in charge of a man who will be their true representative.
"Resolved, That, as the election will take place within two months, our executive committee be instructed to take charge of this movement, and immediately communicate with kindred bodies of business men in all parts of the state to promote the election of Hon. John Wannamaker as United States senator for the state of Pennsylvania."
"It gives us great pleasure to fulfill this duty, and to enclose, at the same time, a copy of the declaration of principles upon which the National League of Business Men is founded.
"Hoping to receive an early and favorable reply, and assuring you of our earnest support, we remain,
"Very respectfully, yours,
"Rudolph Blankenburg, chairman; Howard B. French, William Sellers, Justus C. Strawbridge, Thomas Dolan, William T. Tilden, John G. Croxton, James Pollock, Charles B. Adamson, James Butterworth, John H. Conover, James Doak, Jr., Charles H. Harding, Theodore Justice, Mahlon N. Kline, Frank J. LaLanne, Lucius S. Landreth, Thomas Leaning, Leo Loeb, William H. Lucas, Frank L. Noll, Francis B. Reeves and William W. Supple—Executive Committee."

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17, 1893.
"Messrs. Rudolph Blankenburg, chairman; Howard B. French, William Sellers, Justus C. Strawbridge and others, Philadelphia, Pa.:
"GENTLEMEN—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of yesterday advising me of the action of the executive committee of naming me as a candidate for the United States senate. Most heartily do I subscribe to the declaration of principles upon which your organization is founded, and in compliance with your request I consent to be a candidate for the high office in question, and submit myself to the favorable consideration of the representatives of the people in the general assembly of this commonwealth."
"Very respectfully, yours,
"JOHN WANNAMAKER."

Now that Mr. Wannamaker is formally in the field, the Business Men's League will inaugurate an active canvass in his behalf, supplementing the very thorough and effective work already done through the state by the ex-postmaster general's political friends, among whom are some of the shrewdest organizers known to Pennsylvania politics.

SELECTIONS
OIL AS FUEL.

A Probability That It Will Soon Be Used in the Navy.
The navy department has been engaged in the past two years in making experiments with a view to discovering an economical and feasible plan for the use of oil as fuel for vessels. It begins to look as if the problem were either already solved or were very near solution. The problem is of especial interest to the navy department just now, because of the need of torpedo boats of a high speed. If such a speed can be reached at all, it can be reached more easily with the use of oil as fuel rather than coal, provided the transmission of energy can be secured simply and economically.

In an attack by torpedo boats upon a squadron of war vessels two of the most important features are speed and secrecy. Indeed, the two are almost synonymous, for the reason that it is always advisable to make an attack by torpedo boats at night, and under such conditions the more swiftly a torpedo boat moves the greater is its chance of getting near to a fleet before discovery. The unusual rapidity of advance also serves to disconcert the gunners of the fleet, and, by reducing the time by which the torpedo boats may be under fire, renders the attack more likely to be successful.

The advantages to be derived from the use of oil as fuel are many and noteworthy. In the first place, the weight of the fuel itself is an important matter, as every pound counts upon the speed of the little torpedo boat. It is also true that in case of a long voyage the substitution of oil as fuel would make a decided difference in what is called the steaming radius—that is, the length of voyage a boat may take, using the fuel on board until its supply is exhausted. It is calculated that a vessel which may have a steaming radius of 1,000 miles with a certain bulk of coal would have a steaming radius of 2,000 miles with an equal bulk of petroleum.

There are also to be considered some other important details. With the use of coal as fuel there exists the necessity for the constant employment of stokers on board of a war vessel, in order that coal may be fed to the grates and ashes may be removed from time to time. All this, of course, means so many men, and a large amount of work constantly going on, even in a little torpedo boat, so long as that boat may be in use. With the employment of oil as fuel, however, the stoker is practically abolished, as the fuel is fed automatically to the grate by a spray and there are no ashes to be handled.

Briefly described, the apparatus used by the naval experts in their recent tests consisted of an ordinary firebox over the grate bars, on which were laid grooved bricks, the oil being propelled through these bricks by a fan shaped spray. As the air is constantly passing through the grooves of the bricks and uniting with the burning oil on those bricks the latter become themselves heated to a red heat, and the amount of heat directed upon the boiler becomes reasonably constant and subject to easy regulation. Compressed air is used for purposes of draft and for spraying the oil.

According to the report of the naval experts to Secretary Herbert, 1 pound of oil was found to evaporate from 17 to 20 pounds of water. This is about twice as good results as could be obtained from the use of coal. As regards speed, the experiment seems to show an increase of about 5 per cent in the rate of speed, although the conditions were not most favorable to the use of oil, the boat having been built for coal burning engines. Possibly with the construction of a boat especially built for the use of oil as fuel for the engines, a speed of about two knots per hour greater than that possible in the ordinary torpedo boat might be secured.—Boston Advertiser.

Wars For Independence.
All history teaches that in a war for independence superiority in numbers does not count. For instance, the little republic of Switzerland, surrounded by kingdoms and empires in arms, won its independence upward of 600 years ago and is independent today, yet it has and has always had only an army of militia. The little principality of Montenegro has been fighting the Turks since the fall of Constantinople, even before the discovery of America. The Dutch Republic, and Scotland under Wallace and Bruce, and Prussia under Frederick II in the seven years' war, and America in the Revolution, all succeeded with greater odds of numbers against them than were opposed to the succeeding states. And today Cuba, with only 1,500,000 population, seems to be successfully fighting Spain with nearly 20,000,000. No, in a war for independence numbers do not count, and it has not often happened in the history of the world that a people who have fought with such desperate valor as the Confederates displayed have failed to win independence.—Duncan Rose in Century.

More Curious Than Probable.
A curious explanation of the indisposition of Queen Victoria to have her reign celebrated as the longest in English history is mentioned by a relative of one of the court ladies. It is to the effect that the queen, at heart a vehement Jacobite, holds the elder pretender to have been truly king of England, as James III, and she feels that, as he survived his father 64 years, his reign was longer than hers has been. I give this as it was given to me, with no comment save that numerous other fads about the Stuarts, which the queen undoubtedly cherishes, are not a whit less singular.—Boston Journal.

Poor Blood

When a horse is poor in flesh, a new harness won't give him strength. If a house is cold new furniture won't warm it. If your strength is easily exhausted; work a burden; nerves weak; digestion poor; muscles soft; if you are pale and worn out, the trouble is with the blood. It is not so much IMPURE blood as POOR blood. Pills won't make this blood rich; nor will bitters, nor iron tonics, any more than a new harness will give strength to the horse, or new furniture will make a house warm. For poor blood you want something that will make rich blood.
