

GEN. REEDER ARRESTED

Charged With Conspiracy to Blacken John Wanamaker's Name.

STILL ANOTHER BIG SENSATION

Reeder and Elkin Forced Out of Hastings' Cabinet—David Martin Appointed Secretary—Reeder, Representative Wells and Others Arrested and Held in Jail—A Startling Story.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Harrisburg, Sept. 14.—The predicted overturning at Harrisburg has come. General Frank Reeder, secretary of the commonwealth, has been forced to resign by the governor since his last letter appeared. The governor asked for his resignation. Deputy Attorney General Elkin, Republican state chairman, has also resigned under pressure. In both instances these gentlemen were compelled to get out of office because of their connection with the notorious $20,000 indemnity bond.

Mr. David Martin, of Philadelphia, the widely known political leader of that city, and the man who Senator Quay hates and dreads most, was on Saturday last appointed secretary of the commonwealth, while Colonel Wilbur F. Reeder, the governor's law partner in Bellefonte, was appointed deputy attorney general in place of State Chairman Elkin. There will be a number of other changes as a result of this upheaval. Deputy Secretary of the Commonwealth Colonel J. F. Barnett will also walk the plank. A number of minor officials will be compelled to retire. It is possible that Banking Commissioner Gilkeson may be retired. The governor is determined, apparently, to get rid of everybody who has in any way been identified with any of the crookedness which is alleged to have been going on in Harrisburg.

ATTACKING DAVID MARTIN.

All of the Quay newspapers throughout the state, as a result of his appointment, have commenced a systematic and virulent attack on Secretary Martin. He has been painted in the blackest colors by these partisans, but this is to be expected. It is a part of the general policy of the machine. David Martin is today one of the most experienced men in public life. He has been a leader ever since he became a voter. He has filled high offices of honor and trust with integrity and fidelity. He has been sergeant-at-arms of the house of representatives of Pennsylvania, sergeant-at-arms of the house of representatives at Washington, collector of the port of Philadelphia and the recognized leader of the Republican party in Philadelphia for years. His knowledge of men is co-extensive with the state. He is a close and skilled student of human nature and a business man in the highest sense of the term. He neither drinks nor gambles, and his private life is absolutely stainless. This is the character of the man who has been chosen to succeed Mr. Reeder.

GENERAL REEDER ARRESTED.

Political sensations have been crowding thick and fast since my last letter was written. A sensation which is not second to the exposure of the notorious $20,000 indemnifying bond was created on Saturday last when General Frank Reeder, ex-secretary of the commonwealth, was arrested charged with conspiracy, together with Webster C. Weiss, member of the legislature from Northampton county, and Maurice C. Luckenbach. The three men were charged with conspiracy "to bribe" and "to defame and blacken the reputation of John Wanamaker." Later in the day J. N. Tilliard, a detective, was also arrested as a party to the alleged conspiracy. The complete story of this alleged conspiracy is one of the most notorious ever revealed in the politics of Pennsylvania. It is the outgrowth of the Penrose-Wanamaker senatorial contest this year. The story of the conspiracy, as told in the Philadelphia Press, involves Senator Quay's name, according to an alleged statement of the star witness in the case. The publication in The Press is as follows:

STORY OF THE CONSPIRACY.

The story of the conspiracy and offer to bribe, as alleged in the Informations, dates back to the latter part of November, 1896, the clew to the whole matter having been discovered through a circumstance starting in itself, but not at first supposed to have any connection with political affairs.

The people of Northampton county particularly, and those of the entire slate region as well, will readily recall the sensation that was caused at the time above referred to by the sudden disappearance of one of the best known and most highly respected slate operators in that section. This man, whose name need not now be mentioned, since he has made affidavit to the facts in the case and will appear as a witness in the time, was the manager and controlling spirit of two large slate companies in Northampton county, and was looked upon as one of the foremost slate men in the United States.

At the time of his disappearance he was about to dispose of a vast extent of slate territory to an English syndicate, and the whole slate fraternity were anxiously awaiting the development of his scheme, as it promised great prosperity to that section of the country, when suddenly he disappeared, leaving no trace of his whereabouts, nor communicating his intentions to any of his particular friends.

THE MISSING MAN FOUND.

No possible reason could be assigned for this action on his part, and although his disappearance brought to light many of his business affairs that had not heretofore been generally understood, and certain liabilities of the two companies came to the surface, yet the most rigid examination on the part of the officials of the companies showed that the manager was in no wise criminally involved. Any number of capitalists would have stood ready to back him in any of his enterprises, so thoroughly did he enjoy their confidence, and the only reason that could be assigned for his disappearance was that he was temporarily deranged.

A STRANGE COINCIDENCE.

About this time, also, E. A. Van Valkenburg was arrested at Harrisburg, taken from the scene of the senatorial contest and given a hearing at Pottsville, on the charge of conspiring with a detective by the name of Tilliard to bribe Webster C. Weiss to vote for John Wanamaker for the office of United States senator. It was alleged, even then, that Tilliard had been employed by the Quay people to undertake to trap Van Valkenburg, and, in connection with the disappearance of the slate operator referred to, it began to be whispered about in Northampton county that this same Tilliard had been seen up here, in consultation with the man who had since disappeared.

QUAY AND REEDER.

The story told by this banker, who is also to be a witness in this connection, was that the slate operator had invited him to a private conference, and that in this conference he used the following language: "I have a dirty little political job on hand which Quay and Reeder have asked me to do." The banker said he then showed him a letter, purporting to have been written by Mr. Quay to General Reeder, outlining a plot to manufacture certain evidence against Mr. Wanamaker, using Representative Weiss as a tool in that connection.

The banker also said that the slate man displayed letters and telegrams from General Reeder inviting him to a conference and asking him to assist in a plot in which he should pose as a Wanamaker man, as his doing so would arouse no suspicion, he said, because he had been postmaster at Bangor under Mr. Wanamaker's administration, and had assisted Frank Willing Leach when he was Mr. Quay's lieutenant several times in the county.

DETAILS OF THE PLOT.

Further details of the plot, as the slate man is said to have related them to his banker friend, were that in response to a telegram from General Reeder, he had visited Hoston, where after considerable sparring an arrangement was perfected between General Reeder, Morris Luckenbach of Bethlehem, Webster C. Weiss and himself, whereby he, the slate man, was to go to the Wanamaker people and represent that for a consideration Mr. Weiss would vote for Mr. Wanamaker. A written agreement to that effect was to be executed by Mr. Weiss and delivered to Senator Quay, who, with the document in his possession, would personally demand of Mr. Wanamaker that he withdraw from the contest.

The banker also said that he was told that while the money had not been secured from the Wanamaker people, that in no degree interfered with the scheme, for the money had been supplied by others, and that there was at that time a man in Bangor with $2,000 to carry out the proposition; that he, the slate man, had been ordered to deposit this money in a Bethlehem bank; but, if the Pen Argyll banker desired the deposit, he could have it. This offer was respectfully but firmly refused.

When the above story came to the ears of the friends of Wanamaker's candidacy they were naturally particularly anxious to confirm it. Presently they discovered that the missing slate man had told the same story to a member of the borough council of Bangor, and also his own brother-in-law, who was then and is now a justice of the peace in the same town. This man claims that the slate operator had communicated to him every move he made in the alleged plot.

MADE COPIES OF LETTERS.

The brother-in-law, after the slate operator had disappeared, knowing of the telegrams and letters which had passed between him and General Reeder, and judging them to be of a character as would ruin the future political aspirations of the sender were divulged, is said to have gathered them all up, placed them in a sealed envelope and personally returned them to General Reeder, but, being a shrewd politician, and knowing that with those letters in his possession, he had the leader of the Republican party at his mercy, before returning the letters, in the presence of two witnesses, he made copies of the same, and carefully retained them.

Further confirmation of the brother-in-law's statements concerning the slate operator's correspondence was secured from his former chief clerk and stenographer, and then it was decided that a further search should be made for the missing man himself. It was thought by the friends of Mr. Wanamaker that the man had disappeared through fear of arrest for his connection with the alleged plot, but they determined to find him if possible and bring him to tell his story in court.

Being a slate man, and having been engaged in that business all his life, and all his hopes and ambitions being in that direction, those who were looking for him naturally supposed that he would go into a slate country. This theory was corroborated by the fact that the information was received that he had bought a ticket for Denver. The clew was followed out, and every means known to modern detective agencies were employed to locate the missing man. Carson City was visited at the time of the prize fight; the slate operations of the west, and California and Utah, were also visited, but to no avail.

THE MISSING MAN FOUND.

Finally, however, it was proved that the search had been prosecuted in the right direction. The missing man was located a short time ago in San Francisco, living and working under an assumed name. It was the work of a clever man to open the eyes of the fugitive to the fact that it was for no harm that he was wanted back east, but the clever man's work met with the desired result. The prominent slate operator who so mysteriously disappeared in November last has now come back from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast; his statement has been officially taken down and sworn to. It is claimed that it not only confirms the stories told by the Pen Argyll banker, the Bangor borough councilman and the brother-in-law justice of the peace, but that it contains many additional damaging details.

On this man's affidavit and on the corroborative statements of nearly a dozen witnesses, then, the above information is based, the warrants have been issued and the arrests made.

Some of the matter thus secured will be reproduced in the testimony of the witnesses at the trial of Mr. Van Valkenburg at Pottsville next week. The returned slate operator will be one of these witnesses, and then when the trial of Messrs. Reeder, Luckenbach and Weiss comes up, the same man and the corroborators of his story are said to be determined to come into court again fully prepared to tell all they know concerning the alleged conspiracy to injure Mr. Wanamaker and his friends.

It transpired here tonight that the slate operator above referred to as having personal knowledge of the alleged conspiracy is William A. Winsboro, who disappeared last winter. He was formerly one of General Reeder's trusted followers, and he it is who is expected to be the star witness both in the Van Valkenburg trial at Pottsville next week and at the Reeder-Weiss-Luckenbach trial when it comes up.

This is the story in part as it will be told at the trial. Witnesses, letters and other evidence will be produced to fix this political crime where it belongs. Senator Quay and all the high officers of the state will be subpoenaed to tell what they know about it. John Wanamaker, E. A. Van Valkenburg and others have been the innocent victims of a great conspiracy. The people behind this conspiracy are the machine leaders of the state. What do the people think of them?

SELINGSGROVE.

Students are still coming in, up to this date the number is almost 40 per cent in excess of last year, the new Laboratory is being pushed, a part of it is expected to be occupied this week. The new coach of the Foot Ball team is giving good satisfaction. Prof. B. M. Wagenseller, accompanied by Clarence Masters of Milton, spent Sunday with his parents. In the World of Art and Letters.

As the result of the development of our public school system and the cheapening of books, there has grown up a large class of men and women who seek broader education. Their duties in life, or lack of means, exclude them from the universities. The Cosmopolitan Magazine has undertaken the task of bringing liberal education, in its broadest sense, within the reach of those who have the aspiration, but are deprived of the opportunity. Doctor Andrews, late of Brown University, has undertaken the Presidency of The Cosmopolitan's educational movement. The work, thus begun, is not intended to take the place of regular university work, but to supply a gap in existing educational facilities. Those who are really in search of knowledge will find direction and aid. It can do nothing for those who have not the desire to study. An intended student sends to The Cosmopolitan, New York, his name, occupation, previous course of study, studies desired to be pursued, objects and purpose for which course is designed, and the number of hours' daily or weekly, study which can be given. No charges of any kind will be made to students.

"Saved From the Horrors of Nervous Prostration" by Dr. Miles' Nerve.

COUGH does not always indicate consumption. Mr. W. H. Palmer, of Waterloo, Iowa, writes: "I was taken with a nervous stricture of the bronchial tubes, which developed into nervous prostration. I was so weak I could not sit up. I got no sleep for days except when under the influence of opiates. For four months I suffered agonies and prayed that I might die and be at rest. One physician said I had consumption, for I had a cough that gave me no rest. But a good old physician whose medicine had failed, advised me to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve and I thank God that it has brightened my days, lengthened my life and saved me from the horrors of nervous prostration."
