BLANCO IN CUBA.

The New Captain General Arrives and Issues a Proclamation.

HAVANA, Nov. 1.—The Spanish cruiser Alfonso XIII, with Marshal Blanco, the new governor general of Cuba, on board, was sighted off Havana yesterday morning at 5:30 o'clock. At 7 o'clock the Alfonso XIII entered the harbor, and Lieutenant General Weyler, the Marquis Ahumada, Admiral Navarro and other high military and naval officers went in a special steamer to meet General Blanco.

Marshal Blanco has issued the following proclamation to the inhabitants of Cuba:

"I am again among you, with good will and a sincere desire to serve the general welfare and to establish a lasting peace. I shall follow a broad policy in my endeavor to restore fraternity among all of Cuba's inhabitants. I am sincere in my intention to inaugurate a new government policy, the object of which will be to secure and preserve peace.

"I hope you will all salute and embrace the Spanish flag, throwing aside all party prejudices and discarding alliances with those who are staining the country with blood.

"Clemency awaits all who observe the law, but, however regrettable it may be, I shall rigorously fight those who obstinately or ungratefully continue to carry on war."

Mutinous Spanish Recruits.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—A special dispatch says that 60 recruits at Jaca, in the province of Huesca, Spain, destined for service in Cuba, became mutinous and, deserting their camp, fled to France.

The report is denied by the Madrid officials, but credence is given to it, as there is known to be discontent among the Spanish provincial recruits.

FOUND AT LAST.

Engineer John Foyle's Body Taken From the Hudson River.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Yesterday afternoon the Poughkeepsie volunteer life saving corps, composed of Captain Isaac H. Wood and his three sons, succeeded in accomplishing what divers and dredgers have failed in doing the past week, the recovery of the body of Engineer John Foyle, who rode to his death on engine No. 872 in the disastrous wreck near Garrison on the New York Central railroad a week ago. Captain Wood's three sons, Amos, Edward and George, yesterday went to the scene of the wreck. They were equipped with their best grappling irons and, borrowing a boat at Garrison, commenced their work.

Every inch of ground was carefully gone over, and the body was finally located about 90 feet from shore in the big hole made by the locomotive when it plowed its way to the bottom of the river with its three occupants.

The remains were badly decomposed and were taken to Cold Spring at once and put into a metallic casket.

KILLED AT FOOTBALL.

A Student Receives Fatal Injuries in a Game at Atlanta.

ATLANTA, Nov. 1.—The modern game of football has claimed another victim—Richard Von Gammon, who died from concussion of the brain, induced by injuries received in Saturday afternoon's game between the teams of the University of Virginia and the University of Georgia, on which latter team he was fullback.

The Georgia team has canceled its engagements, and Chancellor Boggs declares it will abandon that form of sport.

Von Gammon's death may end football in Georgia. A bill is now pending before the legislature to make it unlawful, and while it has been regarded with ridicule heretofore, it is probable that it will now be passed. Its author states that he will call it up before the legislature at once.

Deafly Jimson Weed Seed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Two small boys named Carl Gerber and William Roth, while playing in Riverside park, came across some Jimson weed in seed. Not knowing that the latter were poisonous, the children ate several of the seeds. As a result Gerber died at his home, 292 West Eighty-fourth street, and his companion is very sick at his residence, 422 Amsterdam avenue. Jimson weed seeds contain stramonium, a violent narcotic similar in its effects to belladonna.

SAID TO BE A PRIEST

New York Suicide Recognized by Police as a Divine.

FATHER JOHN HOLDEN IS HIS NAME.

It is asserted that he came under Archbishop Corrigan's displeasure Three Years Ago on Account of Mental Peculiarities.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A man found dead in his room in the Central hotel, at 201 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street, and in whose pockets many letters addressed to W. Thomas Stack were found by the police is said by them to be the Rev. Father John Holden, formerly assistant priest in St. Monica's Roman Catholic church, in First avenue.

Stack, or Father Holden, was asphyxiated by gas which it is supposed he turned on with suicidal intent.

There is, however, much mystery connected with the case, and the authorities are working hard to unravel it.

The man went to the Central hotel and registered as J. J. O'Brien.

A bellboy knocked at the room door some hours later, but, receiving no answer, grew frightened and summoned Policeman Tierney of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station. The policeman burst in the door and found Stack lying dead, clothed in the garb of a priest of the Catholic church.

The man was fully dressed in a black diagonal coat, waistcoat and trousers. He wore heavy laced shoes, but no stockings. His black hair was neatly brushed and made a startling background for the pale face, pinched and worn, as if from continued care.

Besides the letters addressed to W. Thomas Stack, which bore no street address, there was only an old briar pipe, a pouch half full of tobacco and a pair of gold plated spectacles. No money was found.

The police of the East One Hundred and Sixteenth street station are convinced that the body is that of the Rev. Father Holden, because they virtually recognize it as that of a man who under that name was arrested a few months ago for disorderly conduct.

He was arraigned in the Harlem court before Magistrate Pool at the time and was discharged because it was proved that he had innocently brought upon himself the jeers of a street crowd.

They say that Father Holden was "silenced" by Archbishop Corrigan about three years ago because of the development of mental peculiarities. He imagined at times that he was the heir to great fortunes and had illusions to the effect that he was about to receive swift promotion in the church.

Father Holden is described as having been a man of great eloquence and splendid learning until his mind weakened under the strain of his church duties. For the past three years, the police say, he had been wandering about the city, sometimes without any home except in the cheap hotels in Harlem.

They also say that he used the name of Stack in many instances when he desired to hide the fact that he was a deposed Catholic priest.

New Congressional Library Opened.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The new Congressional library, which has been in course of construction for the past six years, was opened to the public. There were no ceremonies of any kind. All the departments, with the exception of those devoted to the fine arts and music, are ready for the use of the public, and the work in the two named is being pushed as rapidly as possible. Everything is on a complete scale and delivery and return of books worked satisfactorily. About 350,000 volumes are now on the shelves of the library, many of the books not having as yet been removed from the capitol building.

A MARTYR'S DEATH.

Sudden Demise of George, the Well Known Economist.

MANY EULOGISTS PRAISE HIS NAME.

Splendid Ceremonies in His Honor in the Grand Central Palace, New York, Followed by a Procession More Triumphant Than Funeral.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The sudden death of Henry George, the candidate of the Democracy of Thomas Jefferson for mayor of Greater New York, Friday at the Union Square hotel, caused such a shock as had never before been felt in New York.

It introduced a tragic element into the most stirring and eventful campaign in the history of the metropolis and completely upset all the calculations of the politicians as to the result of the election. Politicians and others had nothing but good words for Mr. George, and expressions of keenest regret were heard on all sides. However much they might have differed with him politically, all admitted the honesty of purpose, the probity of his public and private life and the greatness of his genius.

The nervous strain under which he had been during the campaign, climaxed by the exertions put forth on the previous night, when he addressed four meetings, was the contributing cause of his sudden death. Apoplexy is given by his physician as the direct cause. His first speech Thursday evening was in Whitestone, Queens county. After that he addressed large crowds at Pashing and at College Point before returning to this city. His last speech was in the Central Opera House in New York.

Mr. George was accompanied on his tour, as usual, by Mrs. George, who throughout the campaign had been by his side constantly, trying to keep him from overworking himself. They reached the Union Square hotel at 12 o'clock and, with a few friends, ate supper in the public dining room.

Shortly before 1 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. George retired. In the morning Mr. George complained of not feeling well and attributed his illness to indigestion. Mrs. George, fearing that he might be more ill than he thought, summoned her son, Henry George, Jr. Mr. George's condition was such that it was apparent that a physician's services were needed, and Dr. J. E. Kelly, the family physician, was summoned.

Dr. Kelly saw as soon as he arrived that Mr. George had a stroke of apoplexy. He applied all the known restoratives, but the patient had already lapsed into unconsciousness, and the case seemed hopeless. The end came soon after, and the life work of the great political economist, philosopher and author was over.

Henry George, Jr., was chosen by the Jeffersonian committee, but a few hours after his father's death, to contest the majority of Greater New York in the deceased economist's stead.

Mr. George's body was removed from the hotel early Sunday morning to the Grand Central palace, where thousands of his disciples and others who did not agree with his teachings, but admired his honesty and manhood, heard the public funeral services in the afternoon.

About 50,000 persons viewed the body during the early hours of the day. Few such impressive civic funerals have been known in the history of the world.

The services were particularly impressive. Able representatives of many denominations united their praise of the man who had died in his battle harness. The eulogiums dealt with a remarkable life. The spirit of politics for a time in that hall bowed before the greater spirit of united humanity.

When the protesting ropes were removed, a few minutes after 2 o'clock, a frantic rush was made for the seats in each side of the aisle, and for a moment all decorum and order were broken. Men and women, too, scrambled over the backs of the benches and crushed and crowded in their anxiety to obtain good places.

The five front seats on either side of the casket were reserved for the mourners and friends. It was with difficulty the ushers prevented those being appropriated. Within five minutes the whole of the big hall was densely packed, every available seat being occupied.

Those who spoke at the services in the palace were Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, Father McGlynn, Rabal Gotthelf and John S. Crosby.

All of these gentlemen paid a fitting tribute to the sterling worth of the dead man. A solemn hush pervaded the assembly as the immense audience listened to the words of praise, but it remained for the oratory and eloquence of Father McGlynn, long a personal friend of Mr. George, to provoke a burst of applause that even the solemnity of the scene could not restrain.

The last address was concluded shortly after 5 o'clock and the meeting was dismissed with directions from a member of the committee as to the manner of dismissal from the hall. Nearly all of those present took advantage of the opportunity offered to view the face of Henry George, and the march past his coffin was continued as it had been in progress during the day.

There was no delay in the starting of the procession with the body to Brooklyn. It was just 7 o'clock when Chief Marshal Waring gave orders that the pageant should move, and Sergeant Cannon and 12 mounted policemen wheeled into Lexington avenue from Forty-third street.

The procession arrived at the city hall in Brooklyn at 9:45, where it disbanded. The coffin was then placed in a hearse and driven slowly to Mr. George's former home at Fort Hamilton.

The interment of the remains took place yesterday in Greenwood cemetery, and the funeral was of a private nature.
