WOUNDED IN THE IMAGINATION.

Unique Scarfpin of a Argro Who Was Not flore to ble of a Bullet. The wonderful effect of the imagination upon the mind of man has been demonstrated repeatedly by persons who were willing to experiment. Speaking of this peculiarity, a New Orleans physician who was for many years connected with the Charity hospital gave a striking illustration in the course of a conversation with a Sun reporter.

"As you know," began the physician, "I have long taken an interest in gunshot wounds of the abdomen, and have followed the treatment of some very complicated cases. I was in my room at the hospital one day when an ambulance surgeon came to me and said that a man suffering from a gunshot wound in the abdomen had been brought in for treatment. Like 90 per cent, of such cases, he was colored, for the southern negroes, unlike their porthern brethren, have more faith in the pistol than in the razor, and prefer to shoot up a rival in love or business to the more laborious method of carving, so much in vogue north of Mason and Dixon's line. The wounded man, a big athletic chap of 30, was stretched upon a couch, and at the first glance his time seemed to have come to leave this world. He was breathing laboriously, and the ashen stamp of death was apparent in his face. I asked him where he had been wounded, and $10,00 each, fully juil and mousas- he placed his hand upon the left side | Glas, Henry II. Home humans sessable, of which 250,000 Shares of his abdomen, where the blood showed are now offered for subscriptions at plainly upon the light material of which his clothing was made. He had all the symptoms of a man bleeding to death us I stripped him for a more critical examination.

"When I got a look at the wound I found it a mere tear of the flesh, not much more than skin deep, from which the blood was flowing quite freely. I saw that the bullet had been deflected by something, and told the negro to stand up. He groaned violently and assured me that it would be the death of him to move, but I finally persuaded him that he was not hurt at all, and that after a dressing of collodion had been applied to the wound he could go home. It was a study to watch the man's face as the truth dawned upon him. Fear gave way to doubt and doubt to the complete realization of the situation, and he grinned from ear to ear as he stood up. I asked him to shake his clothes, and as he did so the bullet dropped to the floor.

"I had noticed that the man wore a bullet set in a brass mounting as a scarf pin, and as he stood before me I remarked:

" You seem to be fond of bullets, Has that one in your searf pin a history?

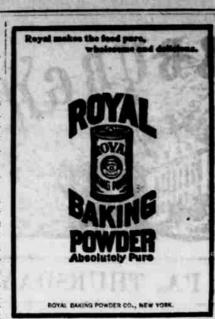

"Wwhat bullet? he stammered, as he felt for his pin and with quivering fingers withdrew it from its resting place. 'I nevah had no bullet in mah pin, boss,' he said, in terror, and then noticed that it wasn't mounted as a jeweler would do it, but sort of wedged into place, with a lapping of the edges here and there.

"I asked the man how many times he had been shot, and he said twice. Then Samuel M. Beyan, President Chesopeake and it was all clear to me. One ball had spent itself upon a button, which was found attached to the bullet on the floor, and the other had struck the strong brass crescent searf pin and had | Reight, Irvin, lat over. wedged itself there. Rev. George Channing wrote an account of the school of his youth, which he attended just after the revolution. Girls and boys attended together the primary school, and sat on seats made of round blocks of wood of various heights, which were furnished by the parents. Children bowed and kissed the teacher's hand on leaving the room. The teaching of spelling was peculiar. It was the last lesson of the day. The master gave out a long word, say multiplication, with a blow of his strap on the desk as a signal for all to start together, and in chorus the whole class enelled out the word in syllables. The teacher's ear was so trained and acute that he at once detected any misspelling. If this happened, he demanded the name of the scholar who made the mistake. If there was any hesitancy or refusal in acknowledgment he kept the whole class until, by repeated trials of long words, accuracy was obtained. The roar of the many voices of the large school, all pitched in different keys, could be heard, on summer days, for a long distance.-Alice Morse Earle, in Spain and the Carlist Cause, Before 1833 Spain was one of the great powers. Between 1833 and 1876 there were actually 38 rebellions, changes of government and coups d'etat. Since 1832 Spain has declined in the scale of nations, and now ranks as little more than a third-rate power. A glorious tribute, indeed, to the wisdom of interfering with the settled succession. In order to understand the pres-John Shafroth, Representative to Congress, ent condition of Spain, we have only to read the daily papers. On the one hand, in Madrid, we see a titular sovereign struggling ineffectually with an empty treasury to stave off bankruptcy, making futile attempts with a discredited C. B. Maugham, 219 Times-Herald, Chicago, Ill.; army to subdue his rebellious colonies, Maurice Joyce, Electro l'icture, Star Building, and relying upon suartial law to crush civil anarchy, which, be it remembered, Cast, J. J. Lambert Owner and Editor Chief- is ever the result of bad government incompetent and tyrannical police, and especially of corrupt finance and of taxation pressing too heavily on the class least able to bear it. On the other hand, in Venice, we see the king waiting until the moment shall arrive for him to make his final essay to save his country from the distress with which the queen regent has proved herself unable to cope.—Fortnightly Review.
