Editorial Paragraphs.

The rapid growth of the protection sentiment in the South is illustrated by a letter received from a Virginia Democrat published in the New York Sun, in which he declares that the Wilson law was an aggregation of inequities and that the only objection to the Dingley law is that it does not go far enough in the interests of protection.

A recent dispatch from Nebraska, commenting upon the local election in that state, says: "The free-silver issue, which was made the leading feature of these elections last year, is being ignored now, old party lines and municipal reforms being the issue. This is accepted as certain signs of Nebraska silver men."

That ardent supporter of free silver and free trade, the Cincinnati Enquirer, in a recent issue, says that the glass industry of Indiana "passes under the spring influences with renewed vigor in every department." Orders for May deliveries are being placed freely and are so plentiful as to keep the plant busy. "The plate-glass industry is on a solid footing and more firm permanent footing than at any time in recent years." And all this under the Dingley tariff and without the tree and unlimited coinage of silver.

Coal mining, which suffered such a depression under the low tariff rates and the general manufacturing and business inactivity accompanying the Wilson law, is being greatly benefited by the higher tariff and reviving industries of the Dingley law. Reports from the Maryland mines say that the industry there "is showing greater activity at this season of the year than at any season in its history," while reports from other sections are equally gratifying and show that the coal miners as well as others interested in the industries of the country made no mistake in voting for protection in 1896.
