Our Clubbing List.

In order to give all a chance to get their papers cheap we have made arrangements with a number of papers to combine them with the Post at special rates. The regular rate per year for the Post is $1.50 but during our special offer we will accept $1.00 per year in advance. Then if any want other papers that we came below we give them the advantage of special rates. The first column names the publisher's price, the second the amount which we add to $1.00 will pay for the "Post" and the publication named. The list is as follows.

You can make a variety of combinations from the above, for instance the Post and N. Y. Tribune for $1.25; the Post and the Phila. Press for $1.50; the Post, the N. Y. Tribune, Womankind and Farm News and other papers for only $1.45 cash in advance and so on combinations can be made to suit purchasers' tastes. Address all orders to the Post or hand them to our agents.

Many old soldiers now feel the effects of the hard service they endured during the war. Mr. Geo. S. Anderson, of Rossville, York county, Penna., who saw the hardest kind of service at the front, is now frequently troubled with rheumatism. "I had a severe attack lately," he says, "and procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It did so much good that I would like to know what you would charge me for one dozen bottles." Mr. Anderson wanted it both for his own use and to supply it to his friend and neighbor, as every family should have a bottle of it in their home, not only for rheumatism, but lame back, sprains, swellings, cuts, bruises and burns, for which it is unequalled. For sale by all Druggists.

OLD COPIES WANTED.

In order to complete our files we want the following named issues of the Post:

July 8, Sept. 16, 1869; Oct. 6, 13, 1870; Jan. 26, 1871; Apr. 17, 1873; Nov. 4, Dec. 23, 1875; Mar. 7, 1878; May 15, 1879; Feb. 17, Mar. 10, 1881; Apr. 23, 1883; Mar. 27, June 12, Aug. 7 and Oct. 30, 1884; Sept. 17, 1885; Jan. 28, May 6, Oct. 28, Dec. 23, 1886; Dec. 29, 1887.

Any of our readers having copies of the above issues will confer a favor by letting us know. Such copies in good condition will command a fair price.

Whooping Cough.

I had a little boy who was nearly dead from an attack of whooping cough. My neighbors recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I did not think that any medicine would help him, but after giving him a few doses of that remedy I noticed an improvement, and one bottle cured him entirely. It is the best cough medicine I ever had in the house.—J. L. Moore, South Burgettstown, Pa. For sale by all Druggists.

SPEED OF GRAY TIMBER WOLF.

Michigan Sportsmen Divided in Opinion Concerning His Power.

For a long time past the sportsmen of this part of the state have been engaged in a bitter controversy regarding the speed of the common gray timber wolf, of which the woods in this portion of the state are full. One faction, headed by Game Warden Fullerton, has contended that a deer can outrun the wolves, while on the other hand the opposing faction contends that a pack of wolves can outrun any animal found in the northern forest.

The latter faction is made up of woodsmen and trappers, who are firm in declaring that the wolves are the champion runners of the north. They back up their statements with cases which have come under their own observation. According to these men the timber wolves have a code of signals, which are thoroughly understood by every member of the pack. For instance, the cry of a wounded wolf brings no companions to his aid, although to the human ear the brute yelps just as loudly when in distress as he does in the chase. However, if you ever have an opportunity of listening to an old dog wolf as he rallies his pack for an assault, you will realize that the brutes understand each other fully, and that each varying yelp is pregnant with meaning.

It is an object lesson which a man will not soon forget to see a deer trying to escape across the frozen surface of a lake, suddenly intercepted by a pair of wolves that have been lying in wait for it. No amount of argument would convince you that these wolves were not the fleetest of the pack and had been so stationed in advance of the drive by those in chase of the deer. The "hill dogs of the north," as the wolves have been designated, are really more sagacious than a shepherd dog, and when they go hungry it is not because they do not use their brains enough, but because food is not to be had anywhere.

A trip through the woods at almost any season of the year will reveal the bones and parts of the hides of deer that have been killed and eaten by wolves, which had fairly run down their prey. As you lie awake in your lonely camp in the forest you can hear the "hell dogs" rushing through the woods not a great distance away. If you listen intently you can also hear the unhappy bleat of the hard-pressed deer which they are pursuing. Next morning, if you make a short search, you will find the mangled carcass of a deer over which the wolves have snapped and fought.

Bert Fay and William Schwartz, of Lake Prairie, which locality seems to be a favorite stamping ground of the wolves, are now arranging for a grand wolf hunt, to be held in the near future. Invitations have been sent to nearly all of the sportsmen of the state. It is expected that there will be 500 hunters present when the circle begins closing in after the drive. Sides will be chosen by the hunters, and the men with the smallest number of scalps to their credit when the hunt is over will pay for a dinner at the town hall.—Chicago Chronicle.

VICTORIA AND GLADSTONE.

Why the Queen is Anxious as to the Health of the G. O. M.

Queen Victoria is very anxious about Mr. Gladstone, and has telegraphic reports of his condition sent to her twice daily. Her venerable majesty—such is the story—has some idea that Mr. Gladstone's death will be but a brief forerunner of her own, because of a prediction once made to her by a fortune teller. Many years ago the queen and the late Prince Albert were out walking together a mile or two distant from the highland palace. They were quite unattended and were passed on the high road by a gipsy caravan. Acting on a sudden impulse Prince Albert hailed the gypsies and intimated that he "and his wife" would like their fortunes told. A tall, gaunt-looking mother of the tribe approached them, and it is supposed, with no idea of their exalted rank. The hand of the prince was the first offered, but with a hurried glance the gypsy dropped it and then for a few moments stared into the face of the queen's husband. "I can tell you of no fortune," she at last muttered. "You live with the sun, but the dark may soon deepen." The queen and the prince laughed, and then her majesty's palm was extended. The gipsy woman looked and then fell on her knees. "I am in the presence of one who is great in this world," she murmured, "and so I give you homage, though I know not whom you may be; your days may be long, but sorrow will not spare you, and when your end comes there will be a falling stone." No explanation was vouchsafed by the gypsy, and as the rest of the caravan's inhabitants were beginning to gather around them a liberal dole was bestowed and the queen and prince resumed their walk. Probably the gipsy's words were forgotten until recalled by the death of the prince consort. The allusion to "a falling stone" remained a problem, but now it might be solved as having reference to a falling (Gladstone). As a prophecy it is no better or worse than other utterings of oracles. It happened to come right in the prince consort's case; it cannot very well come wrong in the queen's case. Her majesty is well stricken with age, and so she cannot long survive Mr. Gladstone, prophecy or no prophecy.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

No Parasite.

"I am a poor, motherless girl!" faltered Evangeline, her voice quivering. But James Wetmore-Smith was not a man easily to be balked. "I do not expect my wife," he replied, gently, albeit somewhat reproachfully, "to be both rich and motherless."—Detroit Journal.
