Men and Nations.

Thoughts about the Present Crisis in America.

BY "NEMO."

How thrilling it is to gaze on the face of a man who is aroused either in denunciation of evil or defence of that which is right. His very face will appear transformed; out of it will have disappeared all traces of pettiness, and as his head is thrown back and his eyes flash, the best that is in him will shine forth. These supreme moments are to be cherished. They throw things into their right proportions; when it seems to the aroused one that even life itself is a small matter in comparison with the truth that must be spoken. Personal ease and comfort are despised until the tongue has uttered the words that are inspired by a released nature. The important thing at such moments is seen to be, that the thing to be done, must be done; no matter who the individual may be who does it; but that the one who is aroused to do, must do or be false to the greatest that is in him. And to that aroused life the truth comes home that failure to do and to dare, may mean that the deed and the daring will never be done; for no two human beings follow exactly the same lines of life or meet the same opportunities. A call to a task is therefore found to be a solemn thing that tests and sits down to small limits those whose tasks are done in the dread fear of their never returning if left undone. Thrilling is it to see a nature on fire. The members of the body must suffer if needs be till the work is finished. They must run and not be weary, they must labor and not rebel, the brain act and not flatter; yet neither feet, nor body, nor brain have any interest in the duty; they are merely servants who must suffer till all is done by the individual who sits in control of brain and all lesser organs.

Multiply all this many million times and then yield yourself to the wonder that fills the soul when a whole nation thrills and rises in infiniteness. The onward sweep of the tempest, the resistless power of the tide, the stupendous motion of an earthquake are trifles beside it; for this is alive, that has purpose. A whole people aroused to action is a spectacle of awe. When by a species of revelation a million minds think alike, and move forward to discharge the task that is before them, individually and collectively, the sublimity of the sight transcends infinitely the sublimest that inanimate nature ever set before human eyes. Where there have been trifling or even important differences before, there will be one vast unity. In the presence of the national duty, a leveling down of pettiness will be accompanied by a leveling up of purpose. Strangely like a man is this body of men and of minds. Deep in the national consciousness it is understood that love of ease and the getting of gain in untrammelled peace are mere dust in the balance when weighed against a national duty. Like the man, a nation awake is forced onward by its inner conviction of what is right and just; and the consequences it must leave to the Arbiter of national fates, from whom cometh national inspiration and from whose heart of mercy comes direct the feeling of mercy and commiseration that possesses the breasts of men, women and children at this moment of national uprising. And in our thousand times ten thousand hearts we feel that

"Once to every time and nation comes the moment to decide, In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side; Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight; Parts the goats upon the left hand, and sheep upon the right, And the choice GOES BY FOR EVER, with the darkness and light."

We know deep our national heart that now is the moment to show to the distressed that justice is our meat and our drink and mercy to the weak our daily thank-offering to God, who has brought us out of our own weakness into strength. We know that opportunities and calls come to nations as they do to men, and that wise is the nation that knoweth the day of its visitation. And much as innocent members suffer when a man is aroused, we know that many who now live must die for an idea, an inspiration, a national purpose, yet the cost is cheap in comparison with the deep national shame of remaining silent when utterance would save, and indolent when action would bless.

THE BODIES OF STARVED PACIFICOS, CRY BY HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS FOR RETRIBUTION THE CALL IS TO YOU, AMERICA. TO WHOM ELSE SHOULD THEY TURN?

(Copyrighted by Daws & Tabor.)
In days of idle peace when thimble glides by as still as swallows' wings in sunny sky. Then all men seem alike, and fool and wise Unsifted pass beneath their bright disguise. But when great deeds are stirring such as claim Strong souls that gladly choose or deal or fame: And high endeavor, self-denial stern, Unflinching purpose, hearts that hotly burn For truth and honor, counting not the cost, But holding life itself thus spent well lost.

Then the true man is clearly manifest And evil looks its worst and good its best, And shame and poor pretence untimely die. Withered 'neath rays of pure reality: So will unfaltering feet the higher climb, Nowing that crisis God's testing time.

Hotel Shikelliny, situated on the heights opposite Sunbury, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday afternoon. Loss about $50,000, insurance $20,000. The fire evidently was the work of an incendiary. The hotel was built by Drummheller Bros. of Sunbury, eight years ago.
