Hostess (to friend who has been brought in to take pot luck)—I'm afraid, Mr. Simpson, we've only got a poor dinner to offer you. Mr. Simpson—My dear Mrs. Jones, I beg you not to apologize! I assure you I think it quite desirable to underfed occasionally.—London Punch.

Considerate Vocalists. The birds are singing light and free With charm that never fails; They never struggle for high C Nor run chromatic scales.—Detroit Free Press.

Interested. "Now that the war is here," said the sidewalk strategist, in a vociferous plaint, "why don't we do something besides talk about it?" And his wife looked at him mildly, and exclaimed: "That's what I would have asked you long ago if I hadn't been afraid of hurting your feelings."—Washington Star.

Devoted to It. "Does your wife do much fancy work?" "Fancy work? She won't even let a porous plaster come into the house without crocheting a red border round it and running a yellow ribbon through the holes."—Tit-Bits.

Society as He Found It. Mrs. Intrude—Where is your father? Adult Son—He is at the store, editing his edition of "Society as I Have Found It." Mrs. Intrude—What? A book? Son—Yes, a ledger full of unpaid and uncollectable bills.—N. Y. Weekly.

Horrible. "What does your wife do when she gets angry with you? Threaten to return to her parents?" "Oh, no, she takes revenge by repeating the fool things I said to her on our wedding trip."—Chicago Daily News.

Worse Indeed. "And so an enemy has spiked all your cannon?" asked the commanding officer. "Worse than that, sir," replied the division chief. "Our bicycle tires are all tacked."—Brooklyn Life.

Hits and Misses. Yeast—Your wife says she misses you when you're away from home. Crismonbeck—Well, she often misses me when I'm at home. She's the worst shot with a plate you ever saw.—Youkers Statesman.

Shrinking. Dolly—What made you choose flannel for your bathing dress? Midge—Mamma made me have it cut to suit her. After it has been in the water a few times it will suit me.—N. Y. Journal.

Can't Resist This. "There is one falsehood which every woman will tell." "What is it?" "She always says the frock she has on is the only respectable one she has."—Chicago Record.

Castles in the Air. "There goes another castle in the air," remarked Admiral Sampson, as one of his shells struck Marro.—N. Y. Journal.

His Problem. "From all I can learn about women," he said, "if I go to the war she will swear to be true and then marry some one else if I am not back in six months, and if I don't go to the war she'll give me the scornful negative on the ground that she wouldn't marry a coward. And there you are!"—Chicago Post.

The Perseimmons. Oh, a little perseimmon grew high on a tree— On a tree—on a tall, tall tree! And a little boy said: "It is growing for me, But I haven't a pole that can reach it," said he— The perseimmon that grew on the tree. Oh, a little perseimmon grew high on a tree— On a tree—on a tall, tall tree! And another boy said: "It is right overhead, And when I grow big I can reach it," he said— The perseimmon that grew on the tree. And while they were talking another boy came To the tree—to the tall, tall tree. And he jerked his short jacket and climbed to the top. While they shouted below: "He will drop! He will drop!" He was fond of perseimmons; he oiled the crop Of perseimmons that grew on the tree! —Atlanta Constitution.

The Usual Programme. When a crisis assails you, look carefully "round. Don't rush into action where dangers abound; Be sure that you think it all over once or twice, And never be backward in asking advice. Never fear that your friends will be cautious and coy. They'll stop in the midst of their duties with joy To hear you describe your dilemma— clear through And tell you just what they think you should do.

Close to Ninety. Here now I stand, upon life's outer verge. Close at my feet an ocean wide and deep. Dark, silent, silent and without a surge. Where earth's past myriads lie in dreamless sleep. 'Tis here I stand without a third of fear. In loneliness allied to the sublime; The broken links of love that bound me here Lie scattered on this treacherous shoal of time. But still I cling to friends who yet remain, Cling to the glorious scenes that round me lie. Striving to stay the haste of years in vain As swifter yet the winged moments fly. Idly, I seek the future to explore, I partly know what is, but naught that is to be. —John Howard Bryant, in Albany Argus.

Lullaby. The wind's in the west, The birds are at rest, The little star sheep Gambol o'er the blue sea; The moon shepherdess, In a lovely old dress, Comes bringing sweet dreams To my baby and me. The white lilies sleep Where the night breezes creep, The jasmine's perfume Through the casement is blown; A whispering call, Each plaintive note falls A lullaby sweet to my baby, my own. —Lena Cooke Don Carlos, in Youth's Companion.

Hereditry. We pride ourselves, in weighing worth and merit, Too much on virtues that we but inherit. Some puny grandeur makes us hate delay. And we are proud to keep our oath and day; But our ancestral follies and abuses We still imitate and make for them excuses. Let him be proud—dared man be proud at all! Who stands where all his fathers used to fall. Holding their virtues fast and passing on To higher good through his own victories won. —Isaac Ouden Rarlin, in Youth's Companion.

Looking Tired. Gosh—Jack and I haven't quarreled in a week. Them—Why don't you make up?—N. Y. Truth.

Highly Conventional. She—I know you are noted for saying bright things. He—But when I see you I can think of nothing bright.—Youkers Statesman.
