What Shall We Do. A serious and dangerous disease prevails in this country, dangerous because so deceptive. It comes on so slowly yet surely that it is often seated before we are aware of it. The name of this disease which may be divided into three distinct stages is, First, Kidney trouble, lumbago, frequent desires to urinate, often with a burning sensation, the flow of urine being copious or scant with strong odor. It allowed to advance, this reaches the second stage, or Bladder trouble, with heavy pain in the abdomen, low down between the navel and water passage, increasing desire to urinate, with scalding sensation in passing, small quantities being passed with difficulty, sometimes necessary to draw with instruments. If urine acid or gravel has formed, it will prove dangerous if neglected. The third stage is Bright's Disease. There is comfort in knowing that Dr. Kilmer, the great kidney and bladder specialist, has discovered a Remedy famous for its marvelous cures of the most distressing cases and known as Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root. It is sold by all druggists. As a proof of the wonderful virtues of this great discovery, Swamp Root, a simple bottle and book of valuable information will be sent absolutely free by mail on application to Dr. Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing kindly mention that you read this liberal offer in The Post.

MODERN FRUIT FARMING. It Pays Where a Fair Proportion of the Crop Can Be Sold Directly to the Consumer. That well-conducted orchards, including the small fruits, are more profitable than ordinary branches of farming is a fact that thousands of farmers are beginning to learn. But it is not the natural conservatism of average farmers that keeps them from making this change. It is one which, if made over the whole farm, will involve expenses that few farmers can afford. In fact, it can only be done by large purchases of commercial manures, chiefly potash and phosphate. Yet so many are the enemies of fruit that, even when the trees and plants have been fertilized at great expense, the fruit may be destroyed by blight, and the farmers be left in the lurch. The only remedy, as farmers are slowly learning, is to cultivate as great a variety of fruits as possible, so that if two or three entirely fail, there may be enough others to take their place. We do not mean by this that a large assortment of varieties of the same species be planted. Most market orchards have far too many, and if their owners were asked which of all these had more than paid expenses, their answer would be restricted to not more than two or three sorts of any species, and in some not more than one. For home use as many varieties as there are tastes may be grown. But this is not business. Usually the farmer, whose orchard is all of the best paying variety, finds that his good enough for himself and family. If then, when he had better grow something else, for popular taste is capricious and cannot be long depended on to favor what is not really good. If the farmer has money enough to tide over non-productive seasons, will it pay him to set the whole farm in fruit? We believe it will, if the farm is reduced in size, so that one man can do all the work of cultivating and caring for trees until fruit-bearing time. Most of the eastern good farming land is destined, we believe, to be divided into small holdings and set with fruit. It will produce more in money value, and we believe, also in nutritive value than if cropped with ordinary farm crops. An apple tree which occupied less than four square rods of land has been known to bear upwards of 50 bushels of fruit in a single season, and this at the time sold at a price that would make the land yield more than $750 per acre. There were more than 15 barrels of apples on the tree, and they sold at one dollar per barrel. With berries, and these are surer than large fruit, larger money returns per acre than this have been secured. With better understanding of the means for fighting insects and fungous diseases, the growing of the fruit is much less hazardous than it used to be. Much, however, depends on having a good location and with the small fruits on a good near retail market. This, of course, limits the amount that each individual grower can produce. At least part of the crop ought always to be sold at retail. The farmer who goes into fruit growing depending wholly on selling it to commission houses, will find so many profits taken between the field and the consumer that his own share in the profit will be nothing—American Cultivator.

A Sure Sign of Croup. Hoarseness in a child that is subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Many mothers who have croupy children always keep this remedy at hand and find that it saves much trouble and worry. It can always be depended upon and is pleasant to take. For sale by all Druggists.
