Eczema! The Only Cut ..

Eczema is more than a skin disease, and no skin remedies can cure it. The doctors are unable to effect a cure, and their mineral mixtures are damaging orders, would treat the man who lies to the most powerful constitution. The whole trouble is in the blood, and Bwift's Specific is the only remedy which can reach such deep-seated blood diseases.

Rezema broke out on my daughter, and con-Mnued to spread until her head was entirely covered. She was treated by several good doctors, but grow worse, and the dreadful disease spread to her face. She was taken to two celebrated health springs, but re fi her skin perfectly smooth. She en years old, and has a magnificent fi hair. Not a sign of the dreadful discuse has ever returned.

Treatment for Lying. The latest theory about the permicious habit of saying things that aren't so is that it's a disease. If you're a born liar you can't be cured, and it's no use trying to do it, but there's hope for mild cases. Dr. Thomas P. Welch, a St. Louis student of brain dismuch as he would an insane patient. "We often hear of people who suddenly develop a propensity for lying that is startling," he said. "A peculiar feature is that the individual has nothing to accomplish and absolutely no excuse for disregarding the truth. The man should consult a physician. He should he treated carefully. The base of his trouble is the nerves. Rest and tonic. with good nursing, would restore these, and gradually the brain would become healthy and the affliction disappear. When the intelligence of dogs comes into question the following may be cited as an instance in proof of the existence of something more than mere instinct in some dogs-or as an evidence of the fertility of some yarn spinners' imagination. The account from an exchange says: "Walking remedy guaranteed to contain no pot- along a residence street of Susquehanna a citizen noticed a little child at play with an immense Newfoundland dog on a lawn. In the rough and tumble sport of the two, the child hurt his dumb playmate, who snapped rather angrily at the child. A woman, who stood watching on the porch, cried out: 'Nero, aren't you ashamed of yourself to frightgen the baby? Go away, you bad dog!' The dog slunk away, whining. Suddenly he sprang toward a flowering plant, bit off one of the fragrant blossoms, and with many extraordinary capers, laid it at the feet of the little child, and then bounded toward the woman to receive a care-s > of forgiveness." The Detroit Free Press describes a tecent railroad disaster in the following poetic phrase: "The brilliant-hued autumn leaves that we have all thought incapable of violence and evil, that have softly fluttered to the curth these past few days to provide a soft and gorgeous carpet for the children of men, swirled into a deep mountain cut on the Lehigh Valley road at the dead of night and as-aliing the air-braking apparatus in countless numbers rendered it utterly ineffective, thus depriving the engineer the control of the Danalo express, and making it impossible for him to run upon a siding in order to escape a coldision with the New York express. The conspiring leaves clogged the mechan-Isin until the express rounded a curve at a tremendous rate of speed and stanshed into the other locomotive with fearful destruction of life and property.

SWEARING-OFF STORIES.

The Moral of Which is That But Few Pledges Are Kept by Those Who Make Them.

"I once swore off smoking." said the clubman. "That was when I was young and did not know myself. I swore off with a friend, and the penalty was a suit of clothes to cost $50. The condition was that we were not to smoke in town. When traveling or hunting or fishing-out of town, in fact-we would be allowed to smoke. The scheme worked well for some time; then I began to want to smoke. I battled with desire for several weeks, each day of the period becoming a harder trial than the preceding. At last, when the longing became too great, I went to see my partner in misery to tell him that we had better call the contract off, as I could not stand it. He was not at home. He had gone out of town a week before and would be absent another week. Then I broke down. The thought of the party of the second part smoking himself blue in the face while I suffered was unbearable. So, with the fine of $80 staring me in the face, I bought a cigar and smoked it. It was worth $80, I thought. But I did not dis for a lamb only; I smoked a vast quantity of cigars before he came home. Then I went to him and told him to order the suit, that I had broken the contract. He smiled quietly, as if to bimself, and then said: 'All right, old fellow; but do not be disturbed about the suit. I kept the contract just three days.""

Another man said: "There were two men in this town who swore off, the Howard; I hate him, you know .- Harbreaker of the contract to pay the other for a ten-dollar hat. Finally one of them weakened, saying to himself he did not mind giving ten dollars for a smoke. While he meditated over the matter, however, he thought out a scheme to save himself on the hat. He went to the hatter's and bought a ten-dollar hat and had it charged to the other fellow. Then he called on the other fellow, and, pointing to the hat, said: 'See that hat, old boy? It is one I have just had charged to you haven't any painted ones .- Yonkers on that swear-off contract.' The other Statesman. fellow cried out: 'How the dickens did you find out I had been smoking? 'Never mind,' said the other. 'A little bird told me.'"

"I swore off once." said another clubman, "and it was just as easy as any thing you ever heard of. I did it by logic. I found I was smoking one eight after another and never getting enough. so I said to myself that if I had to deprive myself at some time I might as well begin with the first as with the steenth eight. Thus I convinced myself that I would have no greater difficulty than in refusing the steenth cigar, and such proved to be the case. I had not the slightest longing for tobacco after I had made up my mind that I had quit. I kept a box of cigars on the mantel, for I said I might want to smoke, and I did not intend to treat myself as one in whom I had no confidence

"Now mark what happened. About a month after I had stopped smoking I began to have periodical indigestion. followed by cramps, which came on at a certain hour of the evening of each day and grew worse and worse until they were quite serious. I tried all kinds of diet, and even starved myself. but without relief. At last, on the night of a strikers' ball. I was actually unable to go out, although I had made a great effort and succeeded in dres-The under the state of the swindler who approaches and the state of the swindler who approaches are the state of the swindler who approaches are the state of the swindler who approaches are the state of the state ing for the entertainment. I lay in So I sat at the table and ate everythine taste had not plagued me in the slightest all that time. But I smoked now just to go out of the world in decent style, like a good diner should. Then I smoked another eigar. Having done my duty, I patiently waited for the pains to begin. They did not do so. nor have they at any time since done so. I have not had trouble from that day to this."-Mobile Register.

Women Doctors of Old. The medical profession, it may not be generally known, has had many skillful women practitioners since remote antiquity. Women practitioners have been practicing in Europe since the third century before Christ, and their genius has done much to develop the science. The first regular qualified woman physician in Europe on record was Agnodice, a native of Athens. At that time it was against the law for a woman to study medicine. Agnodice succeeded in passing through the college, however, disguised as a man, and graduated with honors in 300 B. C. After receiving her degree she practiced among the women of Athens with extraordinary success. In time, however, her secret leaked out, and she was arrested and imprisoned. The women of Athens upon hearing this raised such a storm of protest that she was finally released .- Chicago Chronicle.
