Sept. 9th, 1899. j I will pen a few lines this even ing, but I will leave the description of the wonders and the natural scenery of Colorado for a future letter. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday I spent in Lincoln, Nerbaska, and it was so het that we could scarcely endure the heat. The hot dry winds were blowing and the mercury was floating up around 10: degrees. Thursday it rained and i became cooler. On Friday morning at 4:15 I boarded a train at Lincoln for Denver. The distance is about 500 miles. Half of this distance we were greeted with some very nice farm lands. At McCook, Nebras ka, the farming land disappeared and for 250 miles we crossed a plain upon which nothing grows, but buffalo grass. > Denver, Colo., Sept. 15. I penned a few lines from Colorado Springs on Saturday and will now endeavor to give you an idea of Colorado and its Capital, the metropolis of the Rocky mountain region. Before beginning with that I wish to state that in order to get there the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. DENVER.

An eminent writer, who for fifteen vears has specially studied the past, present and future of the trans-Missourian State, says:

"Penver is the geographical, railroad, financial, commercial, smelting, manufacturing, live stock, educational, and social centre, and general hub' not only of Colorado, but of the entire Rocky Mountain region.

"The population of Denver has increased as follows: 1860, less than 1,000; census 1870, 3,731; 1880 (eensus), 35,628;1890/eensus) 106,-713; 4898 (estimated) 165,000.

"Colorado alone equals in area the whole of New England and the state of New York put together, with greater and more varied resources than any other State in the Union, but the country tributary to Denver (and within which she has no possible rival for 600 miles in any direction) extends far beyond the State of Colorado and practically embraces the whole of the territory west of the Missonri River, with an area considerably greater than the whole of the German Empire.

"In this yast region, every new mine worked, every fresh acre cultivated, every new orchard planted, every new quarry opened, every herd of eattle or flock of sheep turned out to graze, and every manufacturing enterprise started, reacts beneficially on, and sends new life blood to the heart of Denver."

The city of Denver is 5197 feet above the level of the sea or a little less than a mile higher than Middleplace worth the time of a visit. The very soon the city will be fire proof. A view from the home of the capital building affords a splendid sight of the city and the summit of Famous Pike's Peak, a distance of Band, the portrait of Col. Hollabach over 14,000 feet or almost 3 miles 80 miles away. In the basement of The presentation address in behalf Gift, formerly of our town, is here in museum and an unparalelled collecof the donors, John F. Stetler and Colorado Springs. COLORADO SPRINGS.

We left Denver at 1:40 Saturday atternoon for Colorado Springs, On the trip we passed Palmer Lake, a resort place on the very summit of the Divide at an elevation of 7000 feet. Reaching Colorado Springs, we found ourselves in one of the most pleasant mountain resorts of the West. It is a delightful city in which to spend a vacation on account of its excellent hotels, pure dry air, salubrious climate, lovely drives and many places of interest. Its reputation has become world-renowned.

This beautiful little city was laid out as a healthy resort and its fame as a sanitarium is wide-spread and thoroughy deserved. It is sheltered on the west by the range of mounnorth by a spur of mountains called Cheyenne Mountain. The town covers an area of four square miles, so there is plenty of ground around most of the houses; the streets are wide and lined with shade trees. The plateau on which Colorado Springs is built has two watercourses, dividing on the north and joining on the south. The ground
