Thursday, June 14, 1900.

Civilization and commerce always go together. It was so in Hawaii.
It will be so in the Philippines and Porto Rico.

Cotton, provisions and mineral oils show larger export values during the ten months of this fiscal year ending April 30th last than at any time since 1892.

The prosecution of Neely and his associates for the Cuban postal frauds is being vigorously continued by the Administration, and will not cease until sentence has been pronounced on the guilty.

In 1895 we couldn't afford to buy even cheap foreign goods, and the Democratic revenue, under its low tariff, only amounted to $131,818, 530. Last year the Republican protective tariff realized $206,128, 481.

The United States now has a domain nearly three times greater in area than it possessed when it became a nation. We have been expanding all the time, and most of it was added by the party now opposing expansion.

The people of the United States have been tired of paying foreign steamships $200,000,000 each year for carrying our imports and exports.
A bill to put an end to that is pending in Congress and will be passed at the next session.

Of the four reports on the shipping bill filed in Congress during the session just closed, each one specifically declared against the free American registry of foreign-built ships.
The free ship proposition, so far as the United States is concerned, is as dead as Pharaoh.

The Post gave a timely warning to the people of Snyder county to look after the preservation of the block house near Kremer. During the past few days the roof has fallen in. A portion of an old chimney is protruding. It is a disgrace to Snyder county that the only relic of colonial times is permitted to decay and the only vestige of pioneer times to crumble into dust.

During thirty-four years of free trade, the English savings banks increased their deposits by $350,000, 000. During thirty-four years of protection in the United States (1860 to 1893) deposits in our savings banks increased by $1,635,873, 403, and down to 1899 they had increased by $2,225,000,000, including the Wilson bill free trade years, when money was withdrawn from the savings banks.

In the March number of the North American Review, "A British Officer" who had been at the front charged Cecil Rhodes with the responsibility for the South African war, and with inducing Sir Redvers Buller to change the original plan of campaign in such a way as to bring upon the British army the reverses with which it suffered a few months ago. In the June number of the Review, Princess Catherine Radizwell, a friend of Mr. Rhodes, resents those charges in a spirited paper, and warns the English people that they cannot compass a final settlement of the South African difficulty without the co-operation of the "Colossus." Says the princess:

"Mr. Rhodes is the only man who can in assuming power really wield it, independently of political parties, or of ministers with whom he may be obliged to associate and work. The English public must not mistake on that point; the English Government must not think, as I believe it is led to do, that the prestige of Mr. Rhodes is as much shaken in South Africa as it is in London, where he was only made much of while people hoped to make money through him and did so. The inhabitants of South Africa know what they owe to the Colossus. They are well aware that his generosity has always helped those who applied to it, that his ambitions have never been for himself, that his work was always entered into for the good of his country or the benefits of civilization in general. They know that it is to his big mind alone that is due the great idea and principle of an Imperial Government gathering round it and under its rule the whole of South Africa, uniting its two white races, protecting its black and colored ones, and giving to this Dark Continent the benefit of its justice and its laws, the shield of its flag and the respect of the world, which, while it envies and bitterly attacks England and its politics, yet bows before its power and might."
