Moving Selinsgrove University.

The people of Selinsgrove and the friends of Selinsgrove University generally are in a turmoil concerning the question of removing the institution from Selinsgrove to Sunbury, Pa. The matter involves not only the students and the Lutheran church, but the people of Snyder County generally. We believe it is the sphere of a newspaper that holds in high esteem the well-being of its patrons and the intellectual welfare of the community in general to discuss in a friendly way the merits of a question such as this.

We shall endeavor to be impartial in the expression of views and to diminish and not to increase the gap which seems to exist between a portion of the board of trustees and the people of Selinsgrove. The benefits of an educational institution in any community can better be measured by having lost it than in any other way. If we are pardoned a threadbare axiom, but as true to-day as ever, "you never miss the water till the well runs dry." We trust the people of Selinsgrove will not have occasion to learn in a negative way the value of an educational institution. About 40 years ago Missionary Institute and Selinsgrove Female College were chartered. The people of that locality contributed land and gave largely of their means to found the institution now the bone of contention. Missionary Institute struggled along and only during recent years has the college shown more rapid advancement. There was recently inducted into the office of President a man fresh from the Rocky Mountain gold fields that he might give more life and activity to the school. We are told he is a good man and a brilliant fellow.
We know he can electrify an audience. He came from the city of Denver, the financial, commercial and business centre of the whole Rocky Mountain mining region where money is plentiful and where gigantic financial and commercial propositions can be and are quickly consummated. In Denver it would take but a few hours to raise $50,- 000 or even $100,000 for an educational institution or for an industrial enterprise. In small towns like Se-lingsgrove and others scattered throughout the rural sections of any state, commercial propositions of any magnitude require more time for consideration. This is not all. The means is not always in sight. It seems the financial agent of Selinsgrove University did not get the financial encouragement from the President expected. We are not informed what amount was contributed by the people of Selinsgrove nor what amount was expected by the President. It is natural to suppose, however, that the people of Selinsgrove, who must be content to live on a modest income, could not contribute as freely as would the millionaires of Denver. The people of Selinsgrove receive the first and the most benefit from this educational institution and if they have not contributed their share, they should not shirk their duty. Perhaps they have done this, we have not been informed.

When we say they should contribute their share, we do not say that their apportionment should be equivalent to that of Denver capitalists, but it should be something. The students of Selinsgrove University carry a great deal of money into the town of Selinsgrove every year and the business men there profit by this.
No college is self-sustaining without a good-sized endowment. Hence it must have help. It remains for the people of Selinsgrove to do their full share and not run the risk of losing the school.

Now let us consider the other side. President Heiser and a portion of the Board of Directors propose moving the institution to Sunbury, if the people of that town raise $50,000 cash to erect new buildings and donate a site. It would appear that the president had very little patience, and in addition failed to appreciate the difference between the financial ability of the people of Selinsgrove and Denver capitalists.
Sunbury is well-fitted for industrial enterprises, and no doubt better than Selinsgrove, but the latter is better fitted for an educational institution, because the temptations in Snyder County's metropolis are reduced to minimum, while we venture to say, there is not a man in Sunbury who is willing to make a comparison on this score. If the people of Sunbury can get the college on these terms, they are very fortunate and we give them credit for doing all in their power to secure it. It is a good business proposition, but who knows, but in a year or so a vacillating president may sell out to the people of Harrisburg for $100,000 and a site and move there.

There is another and a very important consideration and if a change is made, one which will involve endless litigation and eventually will result in heavy losses by both sides and result in two weak institutions.
A legacy of $40,000 was given to the Theological Seminary of Selinsgrove to be used as an endowment.
How can that be used at Sunbury?
This is a vital question and if the people of Sunbury figure on getting this endowment, they figuring without their host.

Go slow, gentlemen. To move an institution is no easy matter. Get your heads together and heal the breach. It is better for the institution, better for Selinsgrove and better for Sunbury.

Judging Others by Himself.

Selinsgrove Times.
"The Middleburgh Post has been appealing to the people of Snyder county to protect an old log hut near Kreamer by saying it was an old fort and was built for that purpose in the days when the Red Skins were in possession of Middlecreek Valley. We always doubted the Post's saying in that matter. The building might have been a fire water camp for the early settlers, but we doubt if it ever contained any powder and shot, of any amount, for war purposes."

The claim of the Post that the block house at Kreamer was used by the pioneers as a place of refuge is substantiated by the Indian Forts Commission of Pennsylvania, also by Ira C. Schoch, old Matthias Dauberman now deceased, and others.
If the Times wishes to dispute our claims it should cite some authority.

QUERY ANSWERED.

Editor Post.—Please explain the meaning of an inch of rain as there are a great many here who do not understand why an inch of rain fall causes a flood.

Lowell, Pa. SUBSCRIBER.

We have referred the above question to John M. Boyer, Snyder County's representative of the U. S.
Weather Bureau and give his reply below:

Selinsgrove, Pa., June 23, 1900.
Mr. Geo. W. Wagenseiler, Ed. Post, Middleburgh, Pa.

DEAR SIR:—Replying to your question I will give you the following. The measurement of rain fall, is to measure the depth of the sheet of water that would lie on level ground after a rain if none of the water were lost by evaporation or by soaking into the soil. If you consider that a fall of rain measuring one inch in depth, corresponds to the deposit of 25,200 gallons per acre, therefore it is possible for an inch of rain fall to produce a flood.
It has been the case heretofore.

Our rain-gauge as adopted by the Weather Bureau consists of a funnel-shaped receiver, surmounted by a cylindrical 1½ inches in length and 8 inches in diameter. The funnel is placed in a cylindrical reservoir 2.53 inches in diameter and 20 inches in height. The area of the cross-section of the reservoir is to that of the receiver as one to ten, or 1 inch of rain falling in the receiver corresponds with 10 inches of water in the gauge. The rainfall collected in the gauge is measured by means of a graduated rod, marked inches and tenths; 1 inch (10 spaces) on the rod corresponds to 0.1 (0.10) of an inch of rain, and 0.1 of an inch (1 space) on the rod to 0.01 of an inch of rain and so on. It is very seldom that we have a continuous rain fall of one inch with the same velocity during the period required.

Hoping this will be a satisfactory explanation to enable you to answer the question referred to. If you desire any other information on the subject or any information I may be able to give you, I will cheerfully do so. Yours respectfully, J. M. BOYER.
