AGED WOMAN HUNTS GAME.

Colorado Has a Mighty Nimrod of the Gentler Sex Who is Well
Along in Years.

The west has given us many instances of young women who were experts with the rifle, but it has remained for Colorado to produce a huntress of big game who has more than three score years to her credit. Mrs. A. G. Wallihan, says the Chicago Chronicle, who lives in Routt county, has passed her sixty-third year on earth, but still takes pleasure in the chase. She was born in Milwaukee, but at an early age went to the wilds of the west and a large part of her life has been spent in the mountains and by the streams of the centennial state. Her husband is a photographer who makes a specialty of reproducing the counterfeit presentations of wild animals. In his tours in search of specimens Mr. Wallihan has frequently been accompanied by his wife. Advancing years seemed to add to rather than diminish her pleasure in the sports usually monopolized by men and she has accomplished many feats which few women would care to undertake. She has ridden horseback thousands of miles through the wildest sort of country and only last fall made a trip of 300 miles to reach her home after an extended journey. For 11 years Mr. and Mrs. Wallihan traveled in this fashion through the mountains. During the last year, Mrs. Wallihan writes, her health has not been good and so she has been far less active than formerly.

Mr. Wallihan has recently taken pictures of 150 specimens of western game animals, many of which were shot by his wife, and they will be placed on exhibition in the department of forestry and fisheries at Paris this year.

LAUNDERING FINE NAPERY.

Some Points Which Will Be of Value to the Young Housewife.

Hang your linen to dry, using two lines comparatively close and parallel for your table-cloths. (Also for sheets.) Throw one selvage side of your table-cloth over one line (toward the other), allowing it to hang down about a quarter of a yard, and being careful to pin it a short distance from the ends. Take the opposite side of your cloth and throw it over the other line, facing the first line, and pin it in the same manner. This, says Emma Louise Hauck Rowe, in Woman's Home Companion, will form a sort of bag, and will prevent to a considerable extent the wild blowing of the table-cloth in windy weather. After the table-linen is thoroughly dried remove it from the line and prepare to dampen it. A whisk broom is excellent for this purpose. Table-linen, in order to bring out the bright gloss that makes it so attractive, should be dampened very considerably. Sprinkle the table-cloths very freely, being sure that the selvage ends or hemstitched borders are thoroughly damp. Roll up tightly, patting the roll frequently, to spread the dampness. The napkins and doilies should be arranged alternately one upon the other—first a napkin dry from the line, then one which has been wrung out in warm water, then a dry napkin, and following it another wrung out in hot water, and so on. Then roll tightly together.

The Germ of Bad Manners.

"Independence is a trait I like in Americans," said a girl near me the other day. "To think that 'I am as good as every one else' puts a strain of confidence into me." "That same reflection: 'I am as good as every one else,' is at the bottom of a great deal of our proverbial bad manners," was the reply. "Would it not be better to think 'every one else is as good as I am'?" It certainly is a commendable trait to be self-reliant so far as material affairs are concerned, but there is an equality of worth to be recognized in others which is above the obligations to self.—Ada C. Sweet, in Woman's Home Companion.

is Nature's time for rest; and the man who does not take sufficient time to sleep or who cannot sleep when he makes the effort, is wearing out his nervous strength and consuming his vital power. HOME LIFE IN PORTO RICO.

Survival of the Fittest in House Furnishing Follows Experience in Unpleasant Features.

To one unaccustomed to tropical conditions, the furnishing of the Porto Rican home would at first sight seem meager, but it is quite ample, says Harper's Bazar. A short residence will demonstrate that nearly 500 years of experience with the unpleasant features of life in the West Indies have been crowned by a survival of the fittest in furnishing as in other matters. Austrian bent-wood furniture and willow ware constitute the main equipment of the parlors and living rooms. Upholstered furniture is unknown and undesired, little or no attempt being made at decoration, except in the matter of embroidery and fine hand-made lace work. Hundreds of yards of crochet work are used in the embellishment of a single canopied bed. The work is the chief delight of the Porto Rican housewife.

The walls are for the most part bare, but here and there a painting of merit may be seen. The sofa pillow is one of the great features of the home; it is everywhere, in every conceivable size, shape and material. Ferns of gigantic size and exquisite formation, as well as broad-spreading palm leaves, are used to festoon the walls and arched doorways. Cut fresh from day to day, they render the dark, cool rooms inviting and attractive. Potted tropical plants in great variety abound within and without the house.

THE AGULHAS CURRENT.

Its Stream Renders the Passage of Cape Horn Extremely Difficult and Dangerous.

Going south, we find the Agulhas current, beloved of homeward-bound sailing ships round the Cape of Good Hope, pursuing its even, resistless course around the southern horn of Africa changelessly throughout the years, says the Spectator. How its stubborn flow frets the stormy Southern sea! No wonder that the early navigators doubling the cape outward bound, and fearing to go south, believed that some unthinkable demon held sway over those wild waves. The passage of Cape Horn from east to west holds the bad eminence to-day among seafarers of being the most difficult in the world, but what the outward passage around the Cape of Storms must have been before men learned that it was possible to avoid the stream of the Agulhas current by going a few degrees south we of these later days can only imagine. What becomes of the Agulhas current when once it has poured its volume of Indian ocean waters into the Atlantic? Does it sink below the surface some hundreds of fathoms and silently, smoothly glide south to the confines of the Antarctic ice barrier, or does it wander northward into warmer regions? In any case, it fulfills the one grand function of all currents, whether of air or water—the avoidance of stagnation, the circulation of health among the nations of the earth.

DANGER IN A FOX BITE.

An English Baronet's Son Was Bitten
and Died of Blood Poisoning.

Blood poisoning frequently occurs in cases of wounds from the teeth or claws of animals, especially those that feed wholly or in part on putrid flesh, and it is easy to understand that, in the cases of such species as eat only game of their own killing, there must be traces of their feasts, in the shape of shreds of animal matter, left adhering to their claws and teeth to decay and become poisonous in time. It is for this reason that few men who have been "mailed"—as the English express it—by lions or tigers ever recover from their injuries. Arguing along the same lines, it is possible that the number of deaths on record from the bite of the western skunk, or "hydrophobia cat," may be traceable to blood poisoning rather than the rabies. The skunk seems to have a mania for biting people, but in this respect he is not unique. The common house rat where allowed to become overbold from their numbers, frequently nibbles at the fingers, ears or toes of sleepers in dark rooms. But rats are not wholly carnivorous by nature and in consequence there is less danger in their bites. The eldest son of Sir Pryse Pryse—a fox-hunting baronet of Cardiganshire, England—died recently from blood poisoning, superinduced by the bite of a captive fox.

DOWNING A COLORED BRUTE.

Astor Chanler's Commendable Method of Protecting a Girl from Insolent Conduct.

One day not long ago Representative William Aston Chanler was riding in an open car on Broadway in New York, says an exchange of that city. In front of him sat a young and pretty girl. Into the seat with her stepped a burly negro, who soon began to annoy her with his rude stares. Chanler carried a light cane. With the cane he touched the negro on the shoulder.

"Don't do that," he remarked, in a quiet but firm tone, and the negro glared angrily at him. A moment later the annoying attentions were resumed. Once again Chanler touched the negro with his cane.

"Don't do that," he remarked. "I really do not like it."

"And who the devil are you?" said the colored man, angrily. Chanler laid his cane on the chair. Then he arose, seized the negro by the shoulder, threw him bodily into the street while the car was running at high speed, settled back again in his seat, lighted a cigarette and smiled.
