Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets cure biliousness, constipation and headache. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. For sale by the Middleburgh Drug Co.

The opposite of rest is not work, it is restlessness, and one of the popular "quick-lunch counters" is its exponent. The modern time-saving young man, says a keen satirist, gives his order before removing hat or coat, thus economizing 15 seconds. When his order arrives, he gets his fork into it as it appears over his shoulder, and cleans the plate before the sauce appears, which thus has to be eaten by itself. Cups of coffee go down in two swallows. Little piles of cakes are cut in quarters and disappear in four mouthfuls; and the really accomplished luncher assimilates his last quarter of cakes, wiggles into his coat and pays his check at the desk at the same moment. The next he is half a block away in pursuit of a reeding trolley.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phlips, of Poteau, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I can not speak too highly of it." This Remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects—even in the most severe cases make it a favorite everywhere. For sale by the Middleburgh Drug Co.

It sometimes happens, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, that men sent to congress forget that their mission is to represent the people, but their judgment is more than ordinarily at fault when they undertake to defeat the wishes of the country in regard to holding a great national celebration. It is conceded that the Louisiana purchase is one of the supremely important events in the history of the United States. With that addition to our territory opened the future of the republic as a continental power. The centennial of a new era might be allowed to pass without notice, or be observed in some skimped way that would be worse. But the great mass of Americans want it celebrated broadly and generously and favor an international exposition of the highest order, which will attract the attention of the world and be a landmark in our annals. A few congressmen obstruct this patriotic movement and find themselves in an unenviable position. They still have an chance to make it unanimous.

Water for animals. Unless it is absolutely pure disease is sure to invade the herd or flock. We feel that we cannot mention this subject too often or write too strongly on it, says the American Cultivator. The pond of stagnant water or a swamp full of decaying vegetable matter or even decomposing animals, or the more rapid stream which receives the wash of the hillsides where fertilizer is spread or the cattle are pastured, is not clean enough at its best for either man or beast, but it is often much worse than appears from the above description. It may be contaminated by disease from animals that have access to it. The hog cholera has been known to follow the course of a stream downward from the field where it first appeared to infect every herd for miles below that had access to it and through them to other herds near by. The contamination of water by horses that have the glanders is well known, and there is little doubt but that tuberculous germs may be conveyed in the same way. It is also known that fever germs are thus carried in the water supply to the human race, and it is claimed that they may be taken up by the cow and transmitted in her milk possibly without seriously affecting the health of the animal through which they pass. A deep-driven well or a pure spring to which no animals can go, with the water conveyed by pipes to a trough which has an overflow at the top to carry off such impurities, usually lighter than the water, are the best safeguards, and even then the trough should be occasionally emptied and cleaned out.

A Texas Woman's Invention. Harriet R. Fenley, of Dallas, Tex., has invented what horsemen all the world over have long sought—a nailless horseshoe. According to the Scientific American a tread-plate is employed, provided with a superposed hood, both bisected at their front. The tread plates are hinged together. Upon the tread-plate a wear plate, comprising two side plates and a toe-plate, is secured. The hood is fitted on the exterior of the animal's hoof so that the tread plate is drawn against the bottom when the hoof is in place. All injury is avoided to an animal thus shod.

Give the lambs a very little wispy of fine clover hay to bite at. They will soon be educated in the way they should go by very little training.

JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE.

It Will Thrive and Produce Abundantly on Soils Too Poor for Many Other Crops.

The Jerusalem artichoke (Helianthus tuberosus) is a yellow-flowered perennial plant, reaching a height of eight to ten feet and closely resembling a wild sunflower. One writer says that the term Jerusalem, as applied to this plant, is a corruption of the Italian name for the sunflower—girasole—and the name artichoke was applied to it because of the similarity of flavor of the tubers to that of the true artichoke known as the globe or French artichoke (Cynara Scolymus), which is a thistle-like plant in no way resembling the Jerusalem artichoke. Of the globe artichoke the flower buds are the edible portion, while the Jerusalem artichoke is grown almost exclusively for the underground tubers that it produces. These tubers are, as a rule, pear-shaped and somewhat flattened, resembling potatoes to some extent, but not so smooth. There are white, yellow, red and purple varieties. The white and red Brazilian varieties have generally given best results. The tubers were formerly used to a considerable extent as a vegetable, especially before potatoes were so extensively grown, but they are now grown in this country principally for stock food, particularly for hogs. In Europe, however, the tubers are eaten as a vegetable, fed to all kinds of stock, and used for the manufacture of alcohol. The green leaves and stems have been used to some extent, also, as a coarse fodder, and the dried stalks for fuel. The plant will grow on almost any well-drained soil. It will thrive and produce abundantly on light, sandy or gravelly soils too poor for many other crops. The main requirement seems to be a dry soil. If the soil is wet the tubers rot. It is drought resistant, and, as a rule, remarkably free from fungous diseases and insect pests, although there are a number of diseases that have been known to attack it, and in some cases to do seriously injury. The plant, propagated like the potato, by means of tubers, requires more space than the potato.—Farmers' Review.

The story of the Alabama bicyclist who found over the door of a rural church the cheerful text: "This is the Gate of Heaven," with the modifying postscript some distance below: "This Door Closed in Winter Time," recalls a somewhat similar story which Cardinal Manning used to tell of his publishers. He was a man who did not keep his own books in any great numbers on his private shelves—a rare bird among authors—and so one day found it necessary to go to his publishers for a copy of his volume "Confidence in God." To his surprise this conversation took place in the loudest voices between the front and back offices, the men calling to each other at the top of their lungs: "Say, you, send up some of Manning's 'Confidence in God.'" "Can't do it. Manning's 'Confidence in God' is all gone."

Much homage is being paid to Miss Nina Beach, the pretty and plucky Texas girl who shamed scores of men by coming to Galveston from Houston the day after the storm, when they said it was impossible. She had to swim and wade across the whole distance and was the first woman to enter the stricken city. A sick sister in St. Mary's infirmary there was the lodestone that drew Miss Beach to make the perilous trip. Miss Beach modestly tells of her experience: "I am a good swimmer. Why shouldn't I be? I was born and reared here in Galveston, and thousands of times I have swam out beyond the life lines on the beach yonder."

The first greeting the tenderfoot received from a citizen of Bald Butte, Mont., to whose good graces he had been commended, took his breath away. "Pity you didn't come three weeks sooner," said the prominent citizen, genially. "Then you'd have been in time for the hanging! Beautiful hanging! Hanged two! The first one went to the gallows with a firm step, brave as a mountain lion; but the second one, he was a le-e-e-e-tle backward."

Though separated by the storm and washed in different directions, all the members of the Stubbs family at Galveston were rescued. Father, mother and two children were on a floating roof that broke in pieces. The father, with one child, went one way. The mother went another, and the remaining children went in still a third direction. The other evening all four were reunited.

There is a county in Kansas where there are no physicians, and drug store keepers do not make a living. For more than a year there has not been a sick man in the entire county that has not been cared for and restored to health by "herbs" and other household remedies.

Contemplated so-called international exhibitions are becoming so numerous that they clash as to dates. Just now Kansas and Seattle are debating, thus far in a courteous manner, which of them will have an exposition in 1904.

Mrs. Pinkham's Medicine Made a New Woman of Mrs. Kuhn.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 64-192]

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I think it is my duty to write to you expressing my sincere gratitude for the wonderful relief I have experienced by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried different doctors, also different kinds of medicine. I would feel better at times, then would be as bad as ever."

"For eight years I was a great sufferer. I had falling of the womb and was in such misery at my monthly periods I could not work but a little before I would have to lie down. Your medicine has made a new woman of me. I can now work all day and not get tired. I thank you for what you have done for me. I shall always praise your medicine to all suffering women."

—MRS. M. L. SHEARS, GUN MARSH, MICH.

I have taken eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used two packages of your Sanative Wash, also some of the Liver Pills, and I can say that your remedies will do all that you claim for them. Before taking your remedies I was very bad with womb trouble, was nervous, had no ambition, could not sleep, and my food seemed to do me no good. Now I am well, and your medicine has cured me. I will gladly recommend your medicine to every one wherever I go."
