The pumps were still going, although still at work in the engine house. Stuart walked up to a favorite seat on a great stone which cropped out on the hill. One of the few old pines still left on the slope grew close by.

He sat down and took out the letter. It was from Eric. As he read his face darkened:

Dear Stuart-the letter began, with the old familiar sound—I write to you because I have been refused admission to the house. I called twice this week to inquire for you, and the sevants would not let me in. I don't blame you. The times are bringing many questions before us, and the rights of men as men are not to be ignored tree this afternoon, I will meet you there. Your Deep in your heart you condemn us for the movement. If you were in your fathe movement. If you were in your father's place, you would feel exactly as he does about it. How, then, can we expect the old relation between us to be continued?"

Stuart sat silent, looking out over the beautiful valley. The town looked very pretty in its setting of hills and pines. His father's house was the most conspicuous residence to be seen. From where the two men sat it looked palathe rights of men as men are not to be ignored. I don't know that you care to keep up the old acquaintance. It rests with you to say. Eric for the first time grew flushed beneath his dark bronzed face. "No." he said. "I simply wished to state the conditions under which we now live. There is no change in my feelings toward you and cannot be."

"Neither is there in mine toward you, Eric. Why do you place the responsibility so wholly on me, as if I would be the one to change or as if it rested with me to say that our friendship was possible or not?"

"Because it does rest with you. Are you not representative of riches, nower, intelligence, all the great machinery which sets things in motion, society, that world by itself, leisure, culture, advantages? And is it not for you as representative of all these things to bear the responsibility which must always rest on the strong and the educated and the wealthy?" We, the undersigned auditors in and for the County of Snyder, state of Pennsylvania, do hereby certify that in the discharge of the duties devolving upon us by law, we met at the Court House of the County aforesaid on the first Monday of January A. D. 1901 (it being the seventh day of the month) to audit, settle and adjust the accounts of the several offices of said County, whose accounts it is our duty to audit, settle and adjust, and that we find the foregoing statement to be correct, except as stated in the statement to be correct, except as stated in the following note. (See note below).

D. N. APP, J. C. POWERSON, H. A. KLINGLER, County Auditors.

Note —It appears that the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars had been set aside by the County Commissioners for the publication of the General Election Proclamation of 1999 (it being the same amount formerly appropriated.)

being the same amount formerly appropriated.)

G. W. Row, Sheriff, in contracting for said publication exceeded the amount appropriated by twenty-five dollars (25). The sheriff, after having been informed of his error by the board of auditors, personally refunded the said am't into the County treasury. In order No. 418 issued to R. C. F188, Dringe Auspectr in Perry township, we found that an excess in mileage had been allowed of $2, this has also been refunded.

Pneumonia Can be Prevented

This disease always results from a cold or an attack of grip and may be prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. That remedy was extensively used during the epidemics of La Grippe of the past few years, and not a single case has ever been reported that did not recover or that resulted in pneumonia, which shows it to be a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has gained a world wide reputation for its cures of colds and grip. For sale at the Middleburg Drug Store.
