Anglican Fiction.
In the fine old English novel, Har-aid is protesting his unworthiness. "You are wealthy!" he cries, desperately. "You are these broad acres, these oaks and yews—" The beautiful Betty interrupts him. "Does it follow necessarily that I have no yews for you?" she murmurs, blushing with the utmost violence. Here everything goes, and the bulk of it substantially as merry as a marriage bell.—Detroit Journal.
No Other Course Left.
"How did you happen to maul that footpad so mercilessly?" they asked of the mild little fellow. "It was all his own fault," was the reply. "I was too frightened to speak when he stopped me, and he would have had everything his own way if he hadn't grabbed me by the arm on which I was recently vaccinated. I just had to fight, then."—Chicago Post.
Examples.
Men are examples; hurrying through this world because they've got to. A very few show what to do. But more show us what not to.—Washington Star.

Everybody Knows

That nervousness and headache go together. The worry and cares of business or home, overwork, loss of sleep, improper food—all tend to irritate the temper, derange the digestion, weaken the nerves and undermine the health. This tearing down of the life forces must be stopped. The ebbing tide of health must be checked, and new energy, new life, new ambition infused into the whole system. To do this quickly and thoroughly use
"Let me add my testimony to the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Miles' Nervine. After doctoring with several eminent physicians and trying advertised remedies for what was pronounced one of the most stubborn cases of nervous prostration, I found a permanent cure in Nervine. I believe it to be the greatest remedy of the age for those afflicted as I was."
JOHN M. GRESHAM,
