Meanwhile the doctor, Andrew and Eric disappeared. When Stuart and Rhena finally came out after receiving the bell rang. the men and after a closing volley of shouts and drumbeats from the army, they found the three men by the side of a two seated cutter trimmed with spruce boughs. The doctor motioned them to take the back seat.

"What," cried Stuart, "you here yet, doctor? I thought sure you had been called away."

"it's a wonder I wasn't," replied the dector. "All through the ceremony 1

"Do you dare ride with the doctor?" asked Stuart of Rhena.

"I dare go anywhere with you." she replied, and Stuart was excusable for kissing her as he lifted her into the cut-

The doctor had hitched Ajax up with the fastest horse he could find in the hotel stables, and after they had started he had his hands full. The miners to the Duncan house. And so, with the love of the men whose lives and happiness were to be henceforth so deeply mingled with theirs, in the company of the friends who had shared so largely of their experiences and were to be even more to them in coming days, this man and woman began the life that not even death can part, for they are one in Jesus Christ.

A week from that same evening, in a large mansion on a fashionable avenue in New York, Louise Duncan and Hal Vasplaine were married. A card announcing the event was sent to Stuart by Aunt Royal, at whose house the event took place. No notice of the marriage was sent to Rhena as Stuart's wife. It was the first intimation Stuart had had of the fact, the card reaching him two days after. He grieved over the event deeply and felt that the gulf between his sister and himself crowded with great objects, and Rhens was all in all to him, and as time went on he found the sharpness of this pang lessened, though he never for a moment ceased his prayers and love for Louise. The demands on both Stuart and Rhena were certainly no less now that the mines were opened again. The cottages were completed, but Stuart contemplated a general tearing down of all the old cabins on the range. In this he was met by an unexpected and irritating obstinacy on the part of the miners, who did not want to be disturbed.

"They're the most ungrateful lot on earth," said the doctor, to whom Stuart was talking about it. "If I was you, I'd hire some one to touch off every last cabin some windy night and burn up every last one of 'em-1 mean the cabins. They, I mean the men, haven't got brains enough among them all to start a home for feeble minded old women!" Stuart was wrestling with this problem and at the same time adding to his plans for the Hall of Humanity. Many and many a long conference was held in Eric's cottage, at Andrew's and in his own house over the project. Rhena had also proposed another plan, at first stoutly opposed by Eric and even Andrew, but afterward heartily seconded by them. It was, in brief, the shaping of the Duncan mansion into a modern hospital, to be in charge of Dr. Saxon. The house was too large for a living house. Stuart and Rhens wanted to be nearer the town, and Stuart had made his plans to build at once a house that would represent their ideas of what a home should be able we and enable them to be of more use in no col extent, and the people all knew that her marriage had not lessened her love ed a line that reached out into the for them or her desire and willingness Lesson square, past the band stand, and before to save them. It was simply a question of using to the very best advantage jor had arranged they were facing a the wealth which was in their power to use. In many respects the old mansion was admirably adapted for a hospital, and the doctor was certainly entitled asked Stuart, looking into the blushing now to a position where he could face, which never looked so beautiful spend the remainder of his life in usefulness and peace.

Stuart and Rhena were talking this this hall a good many long hours this all over one evening in early spring. winter. A soft rain was falling outside, and the big pines were sobbing the approach of a heavy storm. Stuart was sitting at the big table in the dining room with plans scattered about, and Rhena was walking up and down, her face alive with

There on the stone steps lay a woman's form, and he knew as he stooped and lifted her that his sister had remembered what he said such a cruelly brief time before. He carried her into the chamber where his father had died and laid her on the same bed. As he did so and as Rhena gently threw back the wet fold of a cloak which lay across the face Louise moved and then opened her eyes and looked up at Stuart and Rhena. They will never forget that look. It told them as plainly as words that Louise had come home to

that have not seen, and yet have be-lieved.—John 20:20.

The text treats of two appearances of Jesus to His disciples. The one was upon the evening of the day upon which He arose from the dead. Upon that occasion all the apostles were together, except Thomas. On the following Sunday evening they were together again, Thomas being present this time. The lesson text may be outlined as follows:

V 26-79 The Risen Christ and His Apostles. The picture we have is that of ten of the twelve apostles gathered together in a room in Jerusalem. Other disciples were probably present, including certain women. It was more or less of a secret meeting, the disciples being afraid of the Jews, who were likely to molest them on account of the disappearance of the body of the crucified Jesus. It is into this room and at this time that Jesus comes. None of the apostles had as yet seen Jesus, except Peter; they had only heard of the resurrection, and the news seemed too good to be true. In other words, they hardly dared to believe it, and were far from being utterly convinced. To the frightened disciples the first message of Jesus was one of peace: "Peace be unto you." His second message was one of S. H. Mitchell, in Farm and Home. assurance. He was the risen Saviour; they need not longer doubt, for there were the wounds which they might see. His third message was a call A System of Cultivation That Is Highmessage was concerning the gift of the Holy Spirit which should be as the breath of life to them, and emanate from Himself. The power to forgive sins (v. 23) has been one of the moot questions of the age. Did Christ confer upon disciples the power to forgive sins? We would say that He did not. None can forgive sins save God only. But Christ did use a very impressive means of teaching the disciples how very much depended upon their efforts. They were to preach the Gospel and proclaim the forgiveness of sins. It is the privilege of any and every follower of Jesus Christ to say to those who earnestly seek entrance into the kingdom: "Thy sins be forgiven thee."

Doubting Thomas.-Thomas was not with the other apostles on the occasion just described. The other disciples, therefore, told him that they had actually seen the Lord. Thomas declared he would not believe until he could see and feel the very print of the nails in the hands of Jesus.

Another Appearance; Thomas Convinced .- A week later, or "after eight days," including the two Sundays, as was the Jewish mode of counting time, the apostles again met, this time Thomas with them. Jesus again entered in the same manner as He did the week previous. Seeking out Thomas, Jesus gave him the literal proof of His identity Thomas had asked for, and added: "Be not faithless, but believing." This incident is one of the best proofs of the resurrection we have, that even doubting, skeptical Thomas should be convinced. More than that, he was profoundly moved, and exclaimed: "My Lord and my God," with the emphasis in the first case upon "my" and later on the "God." But Jesus added for those who should come after He had ascended to the Father: "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have be lieved." After all, God is not to be apprehended with the physical sense, but by the spiritual being in man, called the soul, and the sixth sense, which is faith.

Spear Points.

Restitution to men is good evidence of restoration to God. True praise is a receipt for God's faithfulness and a pledge of ours.

God always goes before us, and makes way for us to meet our trials. It does not relieve the heart of malice to use the tongue as an outlet. If God permits the wicked to get riches it ought to teach us their true

WINTER PLANT BOIL.

Plans for Making a Frame in Which Lettuce Is Stored by Laing a Common Lamp.

Make the box trame of good size and place in a sheltered sunny spot, on the south side of the building if possible. Make of inch lumber a good, tight frame 6x12 feet outside measure and two feet deep at the north side and 11/2 feet at south side, to give pitch to the sash. Then make box to grow plants in (a) the same shape as the outside frame but two inches smaller, so that when placed in the frame there will be an open space, b, of one inch all around the plant box for heat to pass around. The south side of plant box should be ten inches deep, north side 16 inches deep. Raise the plant box up flush with the frame, put in two fillets 11 feet 10 inches long, 1 by 11/2 inches. Nail them into the spaces, one at the front, the other at the rear. When finished, the under side of sash should fit close to the edges of frame, box and fillets. Sash should be six feet long and wide enough to cover the plant box except 11/2 inches at each end. Fit on the ends two pieces 21/2 inches wide, same thickness of sash and 51/2 feet long. These will leave two inches open at each corner for gas and smoke to escape, as shown in figure c. Plant box should have a tight bottom and about five inches of rich, mellow soil on it. An opening must be made at the rear, as at a b. and the soil dug out at d, to make room for the heater. The opening must be well closed up except s small ventilator to supply air just below the burner. Two inches below the center of plant box hang with wire a piece of galvanized sheet iron about three by five feet; the length should go from front to rear. The iron is to spread the heat, so as not to overheat the center. Any size wanted, either for outside or house use, may be made from description given. The best lettuce for forcing is Gardeners Favorite or Grand Rapids. Temperature to grow good lettuce must be low the first six weeks. not much if any above 50 degrees .-

ly Praised by Many Successful Growers.

One of the most successful potato growers in the country is an O do man, who recently gave his methods publicity before a meeting of horticulturists. He claimed that by turning under two or three clover sods, and thus securing a large amount of humus in the soil, he could grow a crop of potatoes without the aid of a drop of rain from planting to harvest. He grows only mediumearly sorts, thus enabling him to sow the land to wheat after taking off a crop of potatoes. Plantings are made four inches deep, in drills 32 inches apart and from 12 to 15 inches between the pieces.

Before the potatoes are up the soil should be worked twice with a smoothing harrow to loosen the surface soil and kill starting weeds. As soon as the rows can be made out a cultivator should be used, the teeth being run four inches; but when the tops are four to six inches high the cultivation should be about two inches deep. At least once a week-and as soon as the ground is in condition after a raina shallow cultivation should be given up to the time the vines cover the ground. Much of the cultivation may be done with the weeder, thus keeping the weeds down as well as giving the necessary cultivation .. - National Land

Attacking the Pear Blight. Winter is a good time to attack the pear blight. Investigations have shown that the disease remains over in the diseased branches, the organisms ready to begin again their work in the early spring. The branches that are dead should all be cut off and burned and any branches that have been cast down by the wind should also be included in the collection. In fact, it pays to give the orchard a thorough cleaning, either in fall or or early spring. Burn up all rubbish. The orchard should then be carefully inspected to make sure that all the infected branches have been cut off. Thorough work in this matter will make it easy to keep the trouble in check next year -Farmers' Review.

Food for Fruit Trees. Wood ashes, if not leached or exposed to the weather, are good, but a heavy coating should be given, not less than a barrel to the square rod. Dissolved bone-meal and muriate of potash in about equal proportions make an excellent manure. An application at the rate of 509 pounds to the acre is sufficient. Tobacco-stems are very good, because they contain potash, phosphorie acid and nitro-gen, and size make humns, all of which are needful in all kinds of soils.-H. E. Van Deman, in Rural
