One of the most striking features of modern American life is the accumu-Andrew Carne- lation of immense fortunes in the gie's Noble Gift. hands of individuals. In place of the millionaire we have that awkwardly named but potent personage, the "multimillionaire." It is not surprising, observes Youth's Companion, that his development is regarded with some concern. Great wealth is great power; and it makes a vast difference to the community whetheret is used for the publie good on wholly for selfish ends. One thing at least may be said by way of relieving solicitude upon this matter: that if Americans have acquired the art of getting great fortunes, not a few of them have learned to give generously from their abundance. The American endowments of colleges, libraries, hospitals and other institutions for the material, intellectual and moral improvement of the people mount up every year to a total which amazes observers in other countries, where such enterprises grow more slowly. Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the heaviest portion of it. who holds to the principle that it is a disgrace for a man to die rich, signalized his recent retirement from active business by creating a fund of $5,000,-000 for the benefit of his former workmen. The income of one-fifth is to be devoted to the support of libraries which he had established among them. The income of the remainder is to be used for aiding the injured, pensioning the aged, and relieving the families of those who are killed by accidents. Mr. Carnegie did not make this gift as an act of charity. In his letter announcing it, he described it as a recognition of the deep debt which he owed to the workmen who had contributed to his success." This is a form of debt which, unhappily, not all successful business men and industrial leaders recognize; but just so far as it is acknowledged and frankly met, as in Mr. Carnegie's gift, social problems are greatly simpliffied.

The chief chemist of the department of agriculture has been making a close study of the connection between typhoid and other germ diseases and the consumption of raw vegetables. He now announces that the prevalence of such diseases at certain seasons of the year may often be traced to the eating of raw vegetables grown near cities, on land fertilized by refuse from sewers and by other city offal. He considers this danger important enough to warrant either the sterilization of such fertilizers by oil of vitriol, or the sterilization of the raw vegetables by washing them in tartaric acid and rinsing in pure water. A three per cent. solution of tartaric acid will kill disease germs, and even if a little of the substance should remain after rinsing it is neither unpleasant to the taste nor injurious to the health. In fact, it is found in consid-

"The American soldiers, in physique and intelligence, are superior to any other troops in the world," said Lieut, For Removing Small Stones from Col. Lee, of the British army, to an astonished house of commons recently. The speaker was military attache of the British embassy at Washington during the war with Spain, and accompanied our troops to Cuba. As a expeditions by the homemade fork close student of military affairs, he was familiar with the personnel of the armies of the world, and was disposed to think the British soldier second to no other. His Cuban experiences led him to hold and his candor impelled him to utter the compliment above quoted. Our soldiers in China. serving side by side with the best Farmer Year Book and Agricul- European troops, have been outclassed by none in discipline, self-control and courageous devotion to duty.

ome Valuable Figures Collected by & Corps of Experts of the Department of Agriculture.

We are now passing through one of he two periods of the year when the country roads problem forces itself prominently to the front and becomes living issue with everyone who has not paved streets and improved sidewalks to pass over. There is no state in the union in which the question can be ignored, for there is no state in which the country roads in the opening of spring and the beginning of winter are in reasonably passable condition. Agricultural interests everywhere are the heaviest sufferers from the wretched conditions of the country roads. Just how much they have suffered from this cause they have never been able to estimate. Had they had any conception of the extent of their losses, it is probable they would have exerted themselves long ago to bring about a radical change and would have supplied themselves with good roads irrespective of the first cost of the work, which is decidedly

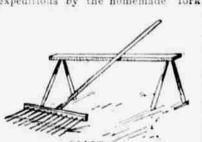

What they have failed to do for hemselves in the matter of estimates the agricultural department has accomplished for them. It set a corps of experts to ascertain the actual conditions and to estimate the direct losses suffered by the farming communities through the lack of permanent country highways easily passable at all seasons of the year and in all conditions of the weather. These experts have estimated that it costs $946,000,000 a year to haul the farm products of the United States from ne farms to points of rail or water shipment. This is far in excess of the freight charges levied by the transportation companies, and the experts ay the amount might be reduced twothirds if every section of country were furnished with good roads. The experts further estimate that the value of the country's farms and farm property would be enhanced by $5,000,000,-000 by the construction of permanent highways through every county and township in the United States. According to the estimates of these xperts the average wagon haul from farm to point of shipment is from 5.3 to 6.9 miles, and the cost per wagon load is $1.89 in the northern and eastern states. In the prairie and the southern states the average haul is 8.8 miles and the cost per wagon load is $2.72. The average cost of hauling farm products from the farms to the point of shipment over the entire United States is 25 cents per ton per mile. The railroads charge less than half a cent per mile per ton for hauling these products to market, or about one-fiftieth the amount it costs the farmers themselves to deliver the goods to the railways. These figures show how extremely shortsighted the agricultural communities are in permitting their highways to remain as they are at present. The difference in the cost of improving the country roads and of hauling over them as they are, if saved, as it might very well be, would make them rich in a very few years.-Chicago Evening Post.

A CATHOLIC JUBILEE.

Closing of the Century Celebration in Old Rome.

Claborate and Impressive Ceremonial Known as the Closing of the Holy Door and Its Significance.

Many ceremonials took place in Rome in connection with the close of the nineteenth century, but none was either more interesting or imposing than that incidental to the closing of the holy door at St. Peter's cathedral. The last year of the century is jubilee year in the Catholic church, as all Catholics and many Protestants are aware. Therefore 1900 was marked by many ceremonies in connection with the period. The opening of the holy door took place over a year ago. and the ceremonial of closing was observed last Christmas eve. Owing to the delicate state of the present pope's health the building in which the opening and closing ceremonies took place had been heated to the temperature of Leo XIII.'s private apartments to avoid any possibility of his holiness taking a chill, says a London paper.

The ceremony of opening the holy door is declared to be symbolical of the fact that the church is open to all men so long as they go there after a thorough and sincere conversion. When the pope opens the door the three knocks which he gives to it represent the three continents-Europe Africa and Asia-to which the pope offers the treasures which he is the medium for dispensing. The three strokes also are looked upon as symbolizing the jey that the jubilee causes to the faithful of heaven, earth and purgatory. The pope, who is seated on a raised throne in front o. the large door in the middle of the grand portico, remains stationary for a brief while until the prince of the throne presents a golden hammer to his holiness, which the latter takes in his right hand and, rising from his door. His clergy follow him, each with a candle in his hand. His hold the door, says in latin; "Open to me these doors of justice!" Then the choir adds: "This is the door of the Eternal One, and the just will enter in," etc. After this the master ma sons knock down the wall which is closes the holy door, the wall being so lightly put together, however, tha its four sides are held together bu slightly, the stones of which it is composed not being cemented. Thus, n sooner has the pope knocked at the holy door than it falls without any resistance. The debris of the wall i distributed among the worshipers, who hasten to gather it in order to put it among their precious relies.

While this is taking place the pope reseats himself on the throne, by after the demolition is completed the penitentiaries of St. Peter take their brooms, clean the floor, remove the pieces of brick and mortar from the passage-which are not looked upo as material to be held in light exteen since relics are made of them-and wash the moldings and all round th door with holy water. This work be ing finished his holiness once more descends from his throne, singing the anthem which opens with the words. "Hace dies quam fecit Dominus." etc. which the choir continues to sing aft er him. Arriving at the holy door the pope recites some prayers, takes the cross, kneels before the door, in tones the Te Deum, and, rising again while singing, passes through the holy door, his clergy following him Everybody who can goes into St. Petor's to witness this superb ceremon or to take part in the vespers at th papal chapel. After the vespers the cardinals take off their robes and put on their red capes, accompany the pope to the door of his private aparts ments and then retire. After the morning mass on Christmas day his Roots and Herbs, (no Minerals) holiness goes to the lodge of the benediction, where he blesses the faiththree-eighths-inch iron rods for the ful in the form which is only used on ket and lasts TWIC- as long. When he went to vote at the recent election he found the polling place filled with tobacco smoke of many flavors. The precinct election officers did not care to lay down their campaign cigars, there was no way to compel them. and so Mr. Danforth disfranchised himself and refused to vote.
