The Post this week published some Editorial Don'ts from the New York Telegraph. It will be well for Post correspondents to study them and profit by them. The Post has some correspondents who write: "John Smith Sunday in town." Sunday is a noun you can not make a verb out of it adding "ed." Say: "John Smith Sunday in town" or something that effect.
The Republican Judicial Conference at the Washington House Tuesday at this week and nominated Hon. H. McClure for President Judge. M. Hassinger of Franklin township, M. Baker of Adamsburg and B. The full story of the internal war which went on within the New York Police Commission when Theodore Roosevelt was a member of that commission has never been told so fully as the chapter of Mr. Jacob A. Riis's "The Making of an American," which is published in THE OUTLOOK September 7. Mr. Riis knew the whole history of this matter, and he writes with every great frankness about its difficulties and enmities which Roosevelt encountered in his attempt to put New York police on a footing of efficiency and honesty. Several incidents which have never before been printed are told in a characteristically amusing way. ($3 a year. THE OUTLOOK COMPANY, 257 Fourth Avenue, New York.)

EDITORIAL DON'TS.

Rules Posted For Guidance of New York Telegraph Reporters.
Don't begin a sentence with the date or hour.
Don't overwork "finally," "however," "then" and similar words.
Don't say "none were," "None" is a contraction of "no one," and therefore of singular number.
Don't separate the infinitive by saying, "He tried to quickly go." Say "He tried quickly," whichever you may mean.
Don't mix tenses, such as "He said the play will be produced tomorrow." Write "He said the play would be produced tomorrow" or "He says the play will be produced tomorrow."
Don't mention well known places inaccurately. There is no such place as "Navarre hotel." It is the Hotel Navarre.
Don't write involved sentences. Many commas are awkward.
Don't begin a story with "the," "a," or "it" if avoidable.
Don't use suicide as a personal noun.
Don't write illegibly, especially proper names. If you don't use a typewriter, you should print names plainly.
Don't use such vulgarisms as "made of," "took hold of," "got to" or "have got." Substitute "went" or "departed;" "seized" or "grasped;" "reached" or "arrived at" and "have."
Don't say "wandering" when you mean "strolling," or "sauntering" or "walking." To wander is to walk aimlessly.
Don't say "laying plans" —"making plans" is better.
Don't say "jumping out of the car," unless you are sure he jumped. The probability is he simply stepped off. Why not say "He left the car?"
Don't on any account say "He claims to be," Write "He professes to be" or "He says he is." A man can "claim" only something specific, such as property, precedence or residence.
Don't forget that copy readers are held accountable for the time they lose correcting bad copy.
Don't write "secure" when you mean "procure," "get" or "obtain." To "secure" is to make fast.
Don't say "surprised" when you mean "astonished" or "amazed." You surprise a man in an act or condition; you "astonish" him with some assertion, revelation or deed.
Don't use a semicolon where a colon is required. The colon is the sign of sequence, the semicolon that of contrast.
Don't write, "John Smith was presented with a watch." "A watch was presented to John Smith," is correct.
Don't say, "Mr. Platt was given a dinner." Mr. Platt was not given.
Avoid all slang and colloquialisms. Write from a lofty viewpoint as a man of the world in a vigorous, bright, masculine style.
Avoid all editorial expressions in the news columns. The editorial page is reserved for opinions. Do not attack any person or proposition or write in praise of either. Let the facts speak for themselves.
Beware of the press agent.
Don't allude to a person by his Christian name only. Use his surname as well.
Don't call a man "Jack" if his name be "John" or "Pat" if his name be "Patrick."

SUCCESSFUL SUMMER SCHOOL
At Heart Lake, Susquehanna county, there were enrolled one hundred and fifty-four Sunday School workers for a week's study of methods of organization and teaching. The place is cool, beautiful, and easy of access. It is 2,000 feet above sea level, so that during the hottest week it was comfortable to hold sessions morning, afternoon and night with eager students. Hugh Cork, of Pittsburg, gave lectures on "The Business End of the Sunday School," Rev. C. A. Oliver, on "Analysis and Study of Bible Books," and Rev. Dr. Chas. Roads, on "Child Study and Human Nature." The students unanimously asked for a school at Heart Lake for 1902. Tuition is free, the instructors being employed by the State Association.

Republican Committee Meeting.

Better Western Union Service Needed.

It is high time that the Western Union Telegraph Company gives the people of Middleburg some decent service. The operators here are ready and willing to extend every courtesy, but the railroad wires must be used to Lewistown or to Selinsgrove and when there is railroad business on the wires, and that is nearly all the time, no Western Union business can get on the wires.

The night operator informs the writer that nearly every night he is compelled to refuse to take telegrams for the reason that he can not get the use of the wires. One evening quite recently six telegrams had to be refused because the railroad wires could not be used.

This town can have decent service if the Western Union wires are extended from Selinsgrove to Middleburg, which would involve but a slight expense in comparison to the revenue it would afford.

In the name of the people of the community the Post calls upon the Western Union management to attend to this matter at once.

Enters the Newspaper Field

Secretary of Agriculture John Hamilton has purchased a one third interest in the State College Times, the only Quay and administration paper in Centre county and with the former publishers, Burns and Crug, has entered into a limited partnership until December, 1906. His entrance into the newspaper field is taken as an indication that he proposes to fight the anti-Quayites, who reeked him in the Republican county convention, to the bitter end.
