MISS MAY BURR IN NAPLES, ITALY.

Miss May Burr has at last achieved a desire over which she has brooded for years—to visit interesting points in Europe. The following from the consulate of the United States at Naples, Italy, dated September 2, 1901, was received at Sunbury on Saturday last, 14th inst. "A Miss Burr, (no first name given) of Sunbury, Pennsylvania, U. S. A. reached Naples this morning, mildly insane. She escaped surveillance and escaped from the Prince liner in which she came from New York City, and was traced to the Rome depot, whither it is presumed she has gone. She told people on the ship that her mother was very deaf and kept a hotel at Sunbury. Her relatives should be informed if known; she should be cared for. Respectfully, etc., A. H. BYINGTON."

As we stated in the Press of the 6th inst, she left her home in Northumberland without telling her mother her intentions, and who didn't know where her only child was until she received a letter from New York City, in which she asked her mother not to worry over her absence as she was in good health and happy, but she gave nothing through which she could be located in that large city. A search was made for her with out the desired result.

A SENSIBLE SUNDAY NEWSPAPER

So Promises The Sunday North American, the First Number of Which Will be out September 29.

The North American announces that on September 29th it will begin the publication of a Sunday edition. Prevailing conditions demand of each metropolitan paper an issue every day in the year, and The North American is sensibly obeying that demand. Rumors of this innovation have already been heard and interest and speculation as to what it will be like is keen. The North American, when it does anything, does it better than any one else, and in the matter of a Sunday paper the same rule is expected to apply.

For one thing, The North American promises that its Sunday Edition will be "different." The standard of text and illustration will be as high as that of any monthly magazine. It will not be "cheap" in any sense. It will not magnify the trivial, neither will it make heroes out of the silly and the commonplace. The North American's motto is, "A sensible Sunday newspaper," and if it is such it certainly will be different and welcome.

It will strive, of course, to be interesting and entertaining. That goes without saying. The special writers and artists are of the first rank and the magnificent mechanical equipment of The North American insures perfect printing.

As to the details of the paper itself, this much is known. There will be four colored supplements in addition to the news sections and sheet music. There will be a supplement of eight pages in colors, devoted exclusively to women's interests, a comic section of four pages in colors, a magazine section of twelve pages in colors and a sixteen-page supplement in colors explaining the involved and varied processes of making a newspaper. The sheet music will be like that on sale in music stores in every particular. The first Sunday North American will probably consist of seventy-six pages of which thirty-two will be used for news.
